Dear Mr. Maxwell

Thank you for your letter of 17 December, and for passing on Mr. Sasakawa's letter to me.

I am glad to hear that you are near a final resolution of the affairs of the Games company.

With best wishes for Christmas and the New Year.

Yours sincerely

Dear Prime Minister

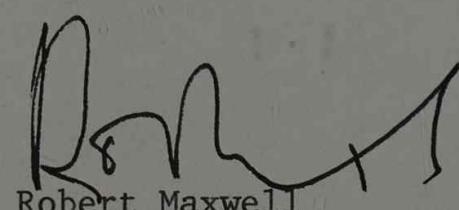

I enclose a personal letter from Mr Ryoichi Sasakawa, the contents of which are I believe self-explanatory.

To bring you quickly up-to-date on the affairs of the Games Company, there are now only two matters standing between us and the final winding down of the XIII Commonwealth Games with the dignity and decorum which you have encouraged me to achieve. There is a tedious and internecine argument between the Games Company and the Commonwealth Games Consortium, with which I shall not weary you.

The other is more serious, namely the apparent determination of the Secretary of State for Scotland that local authorities in Scotland who contribute to the deficit - a critical and integral element in our plan for settling the Company's affairs - will be surcharged or otherwise penalised for the purposes of their grant allocation from public funds. This last minute and unforeseen hitch is, as you can imagine, causing acute anguish to the local authorities; and I believe that there are even threats of legal action. Anything that you can do, in the interests of the final decorous conclusion of this saga without any government grant to the Games Company, to defuse this last minute bureaucratic bombshell will, I know, be very much appreciated.

With best personal wishes

Yours sincerely

My dear Mrs. Prime Minister:

Thank you for your very kind letter of October 22, which has been delivered by Her Majesty's Embassy.

Since I met you in Edinburgh last August, I have quite understood that principles prevent your Government from contributing to the deficit of the Games. The contribution of 300 million yen from the Japan Shipbuilding Industry Foundation of which I am the Chairman will be send as requested by Mr. Maxwell to help the people of Great Britain to wind up the affairs of the Commonwealth Games in good order.

Thank you very much for thinking kindly of the small support that I have been able to give for charitable purposes in the United Kingdom. Please be assured that I will make my utmost efforts to expedite all the necessary procedure, so as the contribution will actually be carried out at an earliest possible date.

Respectfully yours,

Dear Mr. Maxwell,

Thank you for your letter of 15 November about the Commonwealth Games.

It is I fear too early for congratulations yet. But, as you know, Malcolm Rifkind and I have never doubted your ability to wind-up the affairs of the Games Company in good order. We wish you well in achieving the goal which you and your fellow Directors have set yourselves.

Dear David

Your letter of 17 November sought advice on Robert Maxwell's letter of 15 November to the Prime Minister.

There could still be difficulties over winding-up the affairs of the Commonwealth Games Company. Because Mr Maxwell has discriminated in favour of certain creditors these difficulties could be messy and controversial. On the other hand Mr Maxwell has kept faith with the Games to a degree that we had not expected: and it seems certain that winding the Company up will cost him a good deal more than the £700,000 which he is committed to from Pergamon Press.

My Secretary of State thinks that a brief reply from the Prime Minister herself would be appropriate and might help strengthen Mr Maxwell's determination to resolve the remaining difficulties of the Company - the complexity of which could still be considerable.

I attach a draft which Mrs Thatcher may care to consider.

Dear Prime Minister

£2 million interest-free loan to pay Commonwealth Games Creditors

Though I have not yet received Mr Sasakawa's promised donation of approximately £1.3 million to the Commonwealth Games appeal, I am sure that he will send it before the end of the year following the strong and effective supportive letter which you kindly wrote to him.

The 100 small to medium creditors had been waiting for their money for a long time and were beginning to feel the pinch seriously. I have therefore decided to advance interest-free £2 million from our Scottish subsidiary, the Scottish Daily Record & Sunday Mail Ltd. This enables the Games company to settle immediately and in full all small to medium creditors. The remaining big 10 creditors, with the exception of one, have reduced their bills to reasonable levels and/or agreed to make donations to the Games. Once the tenth comes into line which I hope will be before the end of the month, the Games company will be able to pay all its remaining creditors in full as well.

I now expect to be able to wind things up properly and to complete the onerous task of cleaning up the aftermath of the loss-making Games with dignity and in good order.

As is well known, my job was made immensely more difficult by the huge losses we incurred because of the political boycott mounted by the vast majority of Commonwealth countries.

I naturally could not have achieved this alone, and I must put on record the immense debt of gratitude our country owes to Mr Sasakawa for his generosity in this matter.

Though I did not like it at the time, I must tell you I admired the way you stuck to your guns in refusing to allow the use of Central Government funds to help with our deficit and, as everyone can see, it is now certain that we will settle our debts without being a burden on the Government.

I would not like to do it again! It has been very expensive, both in time and money, but I am glad that we were able to avoid the humiliation of having to cancel the Games before they had even started and of giving those Commonwealth countries who boycotted us the satisfaction of pulling us down.

Early in the New Year when these matters will have been properly resolved and our audited accounts, together with a full report of our activities, published, I would like in consultation with my colleagues to put forward for your consideration for Honours a few of the men and women who have played a vital part in organising and ensuring the success of the Xlllth Commonwealth Games and I hope that you will be agreeable to receiving such a list from me. It goes without saying that I shall not be on it!

Yours sincerely

PRESS NOTICE

14 November 1986

SDR & SUNDAY MAIL LEND £2 MILLION TO PAY GAMES CREDITORS

Mr Robert Maxwell, MC, Chairman of the Commonwealth Games company, announced today that the Scottish Daily Record and Sunday Mail company has lent £2 million free of interest to the Commonwealth Games company. As a result all the 90 remaining small-to-medium creditors of the company have been paid in full. The ten biggest business and public sector creditors will also be paid soon.

In a letter accompanying the cheques to the 90 small-to-medium creditors Mr Maxwell said:-

"As you know, we tried long and hard to get financial help from the Government to compensate the company and its creditors, like yourselves, for the grave effects on our finances of the boycott by thirty-two Commonwealth countries. In the end we failed to persuade the Prime Minister.

"Although Mr Sasakawa and I have always made it clear that we could not bear the whole burden by ourselves, we have agreed, despite the refusal of the Government to contribute, to keep open our offer to contribute £2 million, if the ten very largest business and public sector creditors will agree to donate the specific sums which I have proposed to them in writing. Negotiations with them are now well advanced; and in almost all cases we have had firm promises of the necessary contributions, although these promises still need to be formally ratified by the appropriate machinery, which these creditors are now putting into action. However, it is clear that the final haggling over detail with one or two of them could last till Christmas.

"This would be totally unfair on you, the smaller creditors who have waited patiently for three months since the Games for money which in many cases they desperately need. I know what you have been going through, what your worries have been; and I have heard your mute appeal. I am therefore now sending you a cheque for the full amount of what is due to you from the Games company."

COMMONWEALTH FUND-RAISING APPEAL REMAINS OPEN

Any money received hereafter from the continuing fund-raising appeal, which is being kept open to the end of the year, will be distributed amongst the "big ten" creditors in proportion to the payments now available to them in accordance with the offers already made to them.

NOTE TO EDITORS

1. The "big ten" are Trust House Forte, Group 4, GA Group, Clyde Canvas, GKN Kwikform, Edinburgh District Council, Lothian Regional Council, Strathclyde Regional Council, Edinburgh University and CG Consortium.
2. The loan arranged by Mr Maxwell from the SDR to the Games company is interest-free and bridges the period until the donations promised by Mr Sasakawa and Mr Maxwell's interests are received, following the necessary formalities in Japan and the fulfilment of the condition of those pledges, namely the acceptance by the "big ten" creditors of the written proposals made to them by Mr Maxwell some two weeks ago.

16 October 1986.

Robert Maxwell,
Mirror Group Newspapers,
33 Holborn,
London.

Dear Sir,

Following the announcement yesterday, by Her Majesty's Govt., that they reaffirmed their previous statements and would not make any financial contribution to the Games, I wish to place the following views on record.

I was surprised, after the Board Meeting on Monday 13 October, that you had gone direct to No.10 Downing Street with your appeal whereas you had indicated that the appropriate section would be the Scottish Office. You also stated that if any member of the board had any influence with the Secretary of State for Scotland they should try and persuade him to support the appeal for £1,000,000. Obviously by going direct to No.10 you have ruled out any possibility of positive involvement by the Scottish Office.

Also on the 13 October you stated that Mr. Sasakawa would contribute £1,300,000 and Pergamon Press £700,000 towards the Games dependant on the Government making a contribution of £1,000,000. The popular view in Edinburgh is that if this was a genuine offer then it should not be conditional on the Govt. response as you were aware of their declared position when you requested chairmanship of the Games company. If this money was to be contributed to decrease the deficit, why should a philanthropic gesture be qualified in this way? Does it not defeat the purpose of the contribution and that is to lessen the burden on the creditors?

I am aware that many statements have been made as to the financial affairs of the Commonwealth Games but many are unaware that questions were raised in this regard this period last year. Assurances at that time were given on the income to be raised by the Consortium and on that basis we continued to operate. As the period of the Games approached questions were still asked and in May at a Board Meeting I was told that 'I was paranoid about a deficit'. As you are aware at the beginning of June I stated that if the financial position was not resolved by the following week then I would resign from the Board. Two other directors would have taken a similar step. Following that meeting, unbeknown to myself, matters proceeded rapidly. You secretly expressed an interest in the Games affairs, commissioned a report by Coopers and Lybrand and that Sunday I was informed, along with other directors that an international businessman was/businessman was interested in making a major contribution to the Games, the value of which we were informed would be not less than £2,000,000. The name of that individual was not revealed until the following Thursday. On the basis of what we were told we agreed that everything and anything must be done to secure the financial viability of the Games. Private negotiations were conducted with yourself on behalf of the Games and the District Council and that Thursday you were appointed Chairman of the Board.

The publicity arising from this decision was considerable and you assured everyone that you were 'the saviour of the Games' and was 'totally committed to their success'. As you were not, and never have been, a member of the Organising Committee the only interpretation that could be put on your statements at this stage, which are endorsed by the creditors, was that you were underwriting the Games and thus assuring financial viability. Sadly that does not appear the case to the creditors as the deficit facing us today is similar to that projected in June and no amount of creative accountancy can alter that fact. It has been stated that up to and during the period of the Games that yourself and Mirror Group Newspapers obtained many benefits from your involvement, not least in publicity. What comparable standards are there for the contribution of Guinness/DCL and the Mirror Group and advertising obtained? Should the Mirror Groups contribution not have been more? Basically the creditors feel that the benefits in kind obtained by yourself were considerable and that they continued to provide services in the belief you were 'the saviour of the Games' and that all financial commitments would be honoured by yourself.

During the period since your appointment, statements made by yourself assured our creditors of the financial viability of the Games. During the Games period you stated on television that you anticipated a possible surplus and that would be donated to New Zealand. After the Games on the Wogan Show the following week you announced that we were facing a £4,000,000 loss. How could I reconcile this with your statement on the 24 July of a projected £1,500,000. You know I have been critical of your contradictory statements and the manner in which you appeared to denigrate the efforts of all the volunteers before and during the Games. The enjoyment obtained by athletes and spectators and the efficient manner in which the Games were conducted is a lasting compliment to the voluntary effort.

If as you stated that on the rejection of your appeal for money from the Government the company would be liquidated I feel an earlier meeting should now be held and that for the benefit of our creditors you reconsider your conditional offer of contributing to the Games funds.

Yours faithfully,

C. Haug S

29 October 1986

Dear Waugh

I have received your letter of 16 October, 1986. The Board of the Company has censured your conduct unanimously at its meeting on October 27. This may not surprise or shame you, since you appear to have no shame. But you and others to whom have you so sedulously and publicly advertised your antics should know why.

Your letter is characteristic in every particular of the way in which you have conducted your relationship with the Commonwealth Games Company. Having presided, as Vice Chairman for Administration, until June, 1986, over the massive incompetence which led to the imminent collapse of the Games Company and therefore of the Games themselves in June, 1986, and having sat through half a dozen board meetings since that time without expressing one scintilla of reservation about or opposition to the Company's efforts, under my leadership, to raise the necessary funds to meet the legitimate claims of creditors, you now - fancying danger and personal responsibility in the event of a liquidation - take to the hills in the form of a published letter full of misstatements, lies, opprobrious remarks and evasions of your own responsibilities. I can only say that this is typical of the way in which you have conducted yourself from beginning to end and that my personal contempt for your behaviour is only tempered by my recognition of your insignificance, your lack of guts and your willingness to run crying to the media without any regard whatever for the principles of loyalty and collective responsibility which all other directors have accepted.

Since you have published your letter, I will publish mine. For that reason and for no other I detail below the misstatements in your self-serving and mendacious epistle. You scarcely deserve this energy and attention, when efforts are still being made by responsible officers of the company to raise the funds necessary to meet the legitimate hopes of the creditors. But since you have gone public with your lies, I shall go public with the truth.

Let us remember first the position of the Company. We have a large deficit in our finances, caused by the incompetence of the former management, of which you were a prominent part, and by the boycott, for which noone but the Commonwealth governments concerned was responsible. We asked the Government to contribute £1m., which with the £2m. conditionally offered by Mr Sasakawa and myself and with due acceptance of some sacrifice by the biggest creditors, would have allowed all the ordinary creditors to be paid in full. The Government refused, regrettably but within their rights.

In response to the personal appeal of the Prime Minister and to the spontaneous offer of Edinburgh District Council to make a substantial gesture in reducing its claims, Mr Sasakawa and I have agreed to keep our offer open, despite the lack of help from the Government, which was formerly a condition of our offer, provided that the £1m. that was to have come from Government can be raised from others, principally local government in Scotland. There is nowhere else whence it can come.

You had no reason whatever to be 'surprised' that I had written to the Prime Minister. I never, as you so infelicitously put it, 'indicated that the appropriate section would be the Scottish Office'. I certainly said that all persuasion possible should be brought to bear by members of the board on the Scottish office - which, although you seem not to be aware of it, is a part of the government of the United Kingdom - in order to give the best possible chances for our appeal to Her Majesty's Government. It was appropriate and necessary that I should write to the Prime Minister because this matter involved the responsibilities, not only of the Scottish Office, but also of the Treasury and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the collective responsibility of the Cabinet for the reputation of the UK. Your comment that "by going direct to No. 10 we have ruled out any possibility of positive involvement by the Scottish Office" is as asinine as, indeed, it seems. You know as little about, as you have contributed little to, the fund raising efforts of the Company in this difficult period. If you knew what you were talking about, you would know that the Scottish Office was fully aware of the appeal that we, the Commonwealth Games Company, of which you are a director, were making.

Your remark that "the popular view in Edinburgh is that if this - the offer by Mr Sasakawa and myself to contribute £2 million, if the Government will contribute £1 million - was a genuine offer then it would not be conditional on the government" was ignorant and irrelevant. Whatever may be the popular view in Edinburgh, it is not, alas, the populace of Edinburgh that is offering to contribute £2 million. If they had been - at any time in the long period leading up to the Games - there would scarcely have been a financial crisis threatening the cancellation of the Games, which was imminent and certain at the time at which the board of the Company appealed to me to become Chairman and to rescue the Games. It was perfectly reasonable that the offer by Mr Sasakawa and myself, which could not by itself cover all of the claims of the creditors, should be conditional on a smaller contribution by Her Majesty's Government which would enable the Company to pay the creditors 100p in the pound. It is equally reasonable, that condition having been relaxed, that it should now be conditional on local government doing their part.

The next passage of your letter is corrupted, apparently by the omission of one or more lines, which makes it impossible for me to comment on whatever it was you were seeking to say. Your further rhetorical questions in your third paragraph, which display an abysmal ignorance of the circumstances of the case and of the due equity of the solution involving a major contribution by Mr Sasakawa and myself and a lesser contribution by Her Majesty's Government, typically miss the basic point, namely that Mr Sasakawa and I are prepared to make this substantial gesture as part of a definitive resolution of the Games Company's financial affairs. It makes no sense to do so as part of a liquidation.

Your fourth paragraph begins with a long recitation about events before I was involved. I have no comment on these. You then say that "you secretly expressed an interest in the Games affairs" and then took various steps leading to your being "informed, along with other directors, that an international businessman was interested in making a major contribution to the Games, the value of which we were informed would be not less than £2 million". This is a grotesque travesty of what happened. I volunteered no expression of interest, secret or otherwise, in the Games affairs. I needed its problems, its legacy of mismanagement and insolvency and its attendant parochial political paranoia like several holes in the head. Directors of the Company came to me. They told me that the Company would be put into liquidation within days, unless I would intervene. I checked with the Secretary of State for Scotland. He confirmed that, if that was the decision of the Board, the Government would not bail out the Games. The Games themselves would be cancelled. I commissioned, at my own expense, the distinguished firm of accountants, Messrs Coopers and Lybrand, to report on the financial situation of the Company. They did so. It was clear that the Company was in hopeless deficit as a result of its incompetent management, aggravated by parish pump politics and inert fund-raising. The national humiliation of the liquidation of the Company and the cancellation of the Games was indubitably imminent. I judged it my duty to do what I could to avert this catastrophe. If I had known that it would become my privilege to work with rats and cowards, such as yourself, I am not sure that with the benefit of hindsight I would ever have undertaken it. But I did. At no point before the Games did I undertake to commit £2 million or any other sum from my own resources or indeed anything other than my own energies as Chairman of the Company, which I was invited to become, to see that the Games went ahead, as in due course they did, and that the Company did everything possible to honour its obligations to its creditors, something which the previously responsible board of helpers, notably including yourself, had utterly failed to do.

Piling Pelion upon Ossa of misrepresentation, you then say that "the publicity arising from this decision was considerable and you assured everyone that you were 'the saviour of the Games' and was - sic - 'totally committed to their success'". It may have escaped your attention; but additional publicity is hardly a commodity of which I find myself in deficient supply. Far from assuring everyone, or indeed anyone, that I was "the saviour of the Games", this was a description conferred involuntarily upon me by the media on the morrow of the announcement of my involvement. I certainly declared my determination to rescue the Games, as indeed was the responsibility of anyone who had become chairman of the Company; and I certainly said that I was "totally committed to their success". What kind of chairman would not be?

You then proceed to the extraordinarily opaque remark that "as you were not, and never has - sic - been, a member of the Organising Committee, the only interpretation that can be put on your statements at this stage, which are endorsed by the creditors, was that you were underwriting the Games and thus assuring financial viability". To the best of my knowledge the "Organising Committee" was a totally vestigial body of no competence or performance, which had devolved all practical responsibility for the management of the games upon the Games Company, of which I had been invited to become Chairman and which responsibility I had accepted. Nobody above an educational age of 5 could interpret this as "underwriting the games and thus assuring financial viability". Your statement that this infantile interpretation is "endorsed by the creditors" is contradicted by recent newspaper reports that the main body of the creditors, a body of 61 out of a total of under 100, had joined together to seek to persuade Her Majesty's Government, in support of my own initiative, that a contribution from public funds of £1 million, which would buy £3.5 million of relief for the creditors, should be made. That is hardly the action of people who regard the Chairman of the Games company as personally responsible for all of the financial obligations of the company. This is not at all surprising, since the creditors are managed by competent businessmen for whom twice two makes four and not by cowardly local politicians incapable of understanding ABC.

Your encyclopaedia of lies and evasions then proceeds to the statement that "that - my underwriting of the Games - does not appear the case to the creditors as the deficit facing us today is similar to that projected in June and no amount of creative accountancy can alter that fact". Quite apart from the puerile non-sequitur in this remark, your reference to "creative accountancy" is as false as it is actionable. As you very well know the accounts of the Games company since I took over have been kept, prepared and reported at each successive Board meeting by Coopers and Lybrand; and no objection has been raised to them by you or any other Board member. The facts, which have been reported repeatedly to board meetings throughout which you have sat without a murmur of dissent, let alone constructive contribution, are that the fund raising efforts which I put in train after 19 June were on track to close the deficit in the Games account. This is why I was justified in making confident statements at that time. The boycott by certain Commonwealth Governments cost the Games £2.7 million in lost revenue and upwards of a million pounds in extra expenditure, as Messrs Coopers and Lybrand have confirmed. As a result the deficit caused by the boycott is numerically similar to the deficit generated by the incompetence of yourself and your colleagues up to June, 1986. But its cause is completely different. Moreover, had the company gone into liquidation in June, 1986, the actual deficit would have been many millions of pounds greater than that shown by Coopers and Lybrand at the time, because it would have had to have allowed for cancellation penalties and liquidation costs, for which no provision was made in Coopers and Lybrand's report.

A further example of your cowardly attempts to evade your own responsibility was your recent well-publicised demand "to visit the Games offices in order to see the accounts", thereby seeking to imply that there was some concealed mystery which you were fearlessly going to penetrate. This feeble ploy is exposed by the fact that the accounts, kept and prepared by Coopers and Lybrand, have been reported to each Board meeting without a squeak of comment or dissent from yourself. If you were really so keen to be brought up to date, you could have learnt all you wanted to know at the Board meeting on Monday, 27 October, which unlike other more responsible directors you did not even bother to attend.

You say, with your usual evasion of responsibility, that "it has been stated that up to and during the period of the Games that (sic) yourself and Mirror Group Newspapers obtained many benefits from your involvement, not least in publicity". Readers of your letter may be interested to know whether or not you are making this statement. The facts, again, are straightforward. Mirror Group Newspapers paid in cash rather over a quarter of a million pounds for commercial opportunities whose real value was professionally assessed at about a sixth of that sum. In addition we contributed one and three quarter million pounds worth of resources, in publicity for the Games and accountancy services to rectify the abysmal financial control inherited from yourself and your colleagues. I personally need no additional publicity, least of all in association with such as yourself.

You ask "what comparable standards are there for the contribution of Guinness/DCL and the Mirror Group and advertising obtained? The answer is simple. Guinness/DCL paid for what they judged to be a reasonable commercial return. They secured the massive exposure that went with the shirt sponsorship, carried by every athlete in the Games. Moreover, they made their deal when they believed that you and your colleagues on the former Board were going to do your jobs properly and before they knew that you were going to land the Company in such financial trouble that the Games would face imminent collapse and cancellation, as threatened in June.

The Mirror Group has paid massively over the odds because of our particular involvement. You ask whether "the Mirror Groups (sic) contribution should not have been more?". On commercial grounds it should have been very much less. The Mirror waited until the last possible moment to see whether any other sponsor would take up the remaining sponsorship opportunities. None did. In thus becoming sponsor of last resort, and so underwriting the income which the Consortium had completely failed to earn earlier, the Mirror in fact saved the Games from an even greater embarrassment.

You then assert that "the creditors feel that the benefits in kind obtained by yourself were considerable and that they continued to provide services in the belief that you were the saviour of the Games and that all financial commitments would be honoured by yourself". That the creditors feel nothing of the kind is evident, as I have already pointed out, from their own behaviour. Unlike you, they have had the good commercial sense to realise that the "£1 buys £3.50" deal put to the Government was an extremely equitable, generous and attractive one and that the Government should have accepted it, as indeed you agreed at the previous Board meeting.

You ask "How could I reconcile this with your statement on 24 July of a projected £1.5 million (sic ? deficit)". Very easily. Allow for the costs of the boycott; and you have your answer.

Your next gross lie is that "you know I have been critical of your contradictory statements and the manner in which you appeared to denigrate the efforts of all the volunteers before and during the games". I know nothing of the kind. To the best of my knowledge you have never been critical of any of my statements. On the contrary, you have sat almost entirely silent, apart from craven murmured endorsements and supportive votes, throughout all the board meetings over which I have presided since June, which is all of them.

There have been no contradictory statements; and you cite none. Far from denigrating the efforts of all the volunteers before and during the games, I have gone out of my way repeatedly to pay tribute to them. Volunteers, the ordinary unpaid workers for the games, have done a magnificent job. If there are any volunteers who deserve criticism, it is those superannuated local politicians who took it upon themselves to organise something totally beyond their capacities, rushed to me for help when they got out of their depth and then tried to stick their puny pins in my back the moment the going got rough. I do not regard them as volunteers, but as professional bumbler.

Finally, you say that "if as you stated that on the rejection of your appeal for money from the Government the Company would be liquidated I feel an earlier meeting should now be held and that for the benefit of our creditors you can reconsider your conditional offer of contributing to the games funds". I note that you made no such intervention at the Board meeting on October 13, at which the approach I suggested was unanimously approved by all directors, including yourself. It is typical of your total ineffectiveness that you should now call for a "meeting" when what is needed is money. When a Board meeting was held, on October 27, you did not even come. I am devoting my time and energy to raising it. I have little doubt that the creditors would appreciate it if you did the same, except that the yield of efforts from such as yourself is hardly likely to mean much to the creditors.

Yours sincerely

Robert Maxwell

~~Dear David~~ There is no possibility of changing it.

~~Dear 30/10~~

Mr Ryoichi Sasakawa

~~at~~ ~~Japan~~

As requested, we telegraphed to Tokyo the text of the Prime Minister's letter of 22 October to Mr Sasakawa, the original of which you sent direct to the Private Secretary to the Ambassador at Tokyo on 23 October.

Of course we fully understand the importance of this letter to Mr Sasakawa in the context of the Commonwealth Games. The Embassy have however confirmed our own concern about the third sentence in the third paragraph of the Prime Minister's letter (beginning "I am sure"). We and they consider that there is a serious risk of embarrassment to the Prime Minister if, as is quite possible, Mr Sasakawa were to make public the letter in its present terms, or selected parts of it. In particular, the phrase referring to matters of principle might be open to mischievous misconstruction. Despite his philanthropic and charitable activities around the world, Mr Sasakawa is perceived by many in Japan and abroad to be at best a supporter of extreme right-wing political views and at worst a major figure in the Japanese underworld. His principles are therefore a source of constant controversy in Japan.

I enclose a personality note on Mr Sasakawa outlining something of his background, also (to illustrate the sort of comments that are regularly made) an extract from the diary in "The Independent" of 29 October.

In the circumstances we recommend at least the removal of the sentence about principle before the letter is delivered in Tokyo. If you agree we will immediately instruct the Embassy to deliver a copy of the amended text without delay. A revised original signed by the Prime Minister could then follow by diplomatic bag.

Tim Brinton, a backbencher, will talk about "Conservative communications policy". Reserve your places now.

Keeping mum

WHILE foreign ministers give their views on the quarrel between Britain and Syria, one interested party has been strangely silent. What does Abu Nidal have to say for himself? A phone call to one of his offices in Damascus yesterday elicited the reply that "we are not issuing a statement yet". Nidal's other office was even more bashful: the person answering the phone announced "We're a commercial company" — only to spoil it all by bursting into a fit of giggles.

Remain nameless

HERE is a public service announcement: William Waldegrave would like it to be known that his surname is pronounced Wal-grave, with the "de" silent. Probably.

"It's his own fault, really," says an ungracious person from the BBC's pronunciation unit. "When he was elected to Parliament in 1979 we wrote to ask how we should pronounce the name. His secretary replied that it was Wal-de-grave, with every syllable sounded. So we've called him that — until now."

What prompted the change was a complaint from one of Waldegrave's constituents. The BBC wrote to Waldegrave again, and this time his secretary recommended the version without the "de".

A press officer at the Department of the Environment, where Waldegrave is a minister, gave me the official version: "I know he pronounces it Walgrave but we call him Wal-de-grave, because we're used to it." Another Whitehall compromise.

Eastern promise

WHO is this Ryoichi Sasakawa, the 87-year-old Japanese "philanthropist" who is putting up £1.3 m to help cover the loss made by Robert Maxwell's Commonwealth Games?

Well, he is the begetter of the Great Britain Sasakawa Foundation, a charity founded last year to promote social, cultural and economic contacts between Britain and Japan. (Chairman: Robert Maxwell.) But he also has quite a political record. In 1931 he founded Kokusai Taishuto, a Japanese fascist party which supported Mussolini. After the war he was jailed for three years.

Not a very savoury bedfellow for Maxwell, surely? "People don't seem to realise that he may have changed in his politics," Maxwell's spokesman, Paul Quade, says wearily, "as most of us do as the years go by."

Of course: but any change in Sasakawa's politics over the years has been pretty slight. He has funded all sorts of far-right causes in Japan since the war; he has been an enthusiastic promoter of the Moonies; and he has helped to finance the World Anti-Communist League. Oh, and in 1974 he set up the World Karate Federation. "Basically," says one expert on these matters, "he's into martial arts and extremely right-wing nationalism." And, apparently, Commonwealth Games.

Born 1899 in Osaka. Left money as a young man, he early became a millionaire. Formed and led the extreme right wing Kokusai Taishuto (National Essence Party), 1931. Involved in the pre-war defence industry in 1932 he established the "National Volunteer Flying Corps" a private airforce dedicated to preserving the person of the Emperor. In 1939 he is reputed to have made a secret visit to Italy, to negotiate Axis agreements with Mussolini. Elected to the Diet 1942. A leader of the anti-surrender groups, he was arrested and imprisoned (though never convicted) as a suspected Class A war criminal. He shared a cell with Nobusuke Kishi, later to become Prime Minister, and Yoshio Kodama, "doyen" of the post-war ultra-rightists, and developed close friendships with both. After his release from prison, he established his motor boat racing industry, whose gambling profits have earned him a huge fortune, allowed him to diversify his business interests, and further his right wing political views.

Sasakawa remains a shadowy figure. He has used his money to buy respectability and political influence. A percentage of his income goes to the "non profit" Japan Shipbuilding Industries Promotion Association, which in turn allocates funds to a host of legitimate, but rightist-inclined organisations such as martial arts associations, disabled veterans groups, the Firemen's Association and bodies for the "moral education" of children. As a result of these activities, he has links with the Police, Armed Forces and even the Imperial Family (he has received the Emperor at disabled veterans functions).

He has had some success in building a reputation for philanthropy. He claims to have given some 12 billion dollars to charitable causes, and has earned himself a WHO commendation, the UN Peace Prize and a Directorship of the UN Peace University in Costa Rica. On overseas travels he has been received by European royalty and by ex-President Carter. He has been presented to The Queen twice. In 1984 he set up the Great Britain Sasakawa Foundation, with an endowment of some £10 million), to foster cultural and educational links between Britain and Japan.

He is a small, apparently robust man, who claims still to run four kilometres every morning. He speaks a little English. He has an impish sense of humour, and an enormous ego. His wife runs a major school of Japanese traditional poetry and dance.

MAXWELL OFFERS HOPE TO GAMES CREDITORS
(CORRECTED REPETITION)

NEWSPAPER PUBLISHER ROBERT MAXWELL TODAY OFFERED NEW HOPE TO THE CREDITORS OF THE DEBT-RIDDEN EDINBURGH COMMONWEALTH GAMES.

HE SAID IT WAS NOW EXPECTED THAT ALL LIABILITIES WOULD BE MET IN FULL, DESPITE THE GOVERNMENT'S REFUSAL TO INJECT ANY RESCUE MONEY.

BUT MR MAXWELL SAID FULL PAYMENT TO THE CREDITORS - WHO ARE OWED SOME £3.5 MILLION, WAS SUBJECT TO THE FULFILMENT OF PROMISED DONATIONS AND THE OWNERS OF THE GAMES' FUND-RAISING CONSORTIUM WAIVING A £300,000 DEBT.

HOWEVER, THE APPEAL TO THE FUND-RAISING CONSORTIUM PROMPTED A REQUEST TO MR MAXWELL FOR PRECISE FIGURES ON THE COSTS AND DEFICIT OF THE GAMES.

MR MAURICE GRIFFITHS, A DIRECTOR OF THE CONSORTIUM, WHOSE PARTNERS ARE ADVERTISING AGENTS SAAATCHI AND SAAATCHI AND CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS ARTHUR YOUNG, SAID: "THE CONSORTIUM HAS ALREADY MADE A MASSIVE CONTRIBUTION TO THE SUCCESS OF THE GAMES.

"IN DECIDING WHETHER OR NOT WE CONTRIBUTE ANYTHING MORE, WE WOULD LIKE TO LOOK AT THE FIGURES ON HOW THE COSTS OF THE GAMES WERE ARRIVED AT, WHO THE CREDITORS ARE, AND HOW MUCH THEY ARE BEING ASKED FOR."

MR GRIFFITHS SAID THE CONSORTIUM HAD ITS OWN CREDITORS TO PAY AND SO IT WOULD NOT BE EASY TO WAIVE THE FEES.

Dear Prime Minister

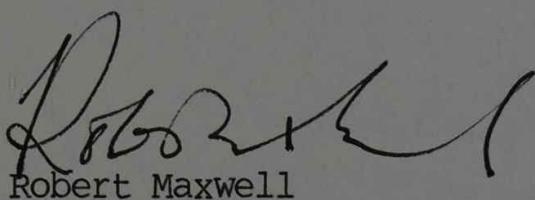

DAN 24/10.

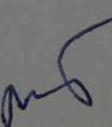

I cannot let yesterday pass without dropping you a brief line to say a simple, but sincere, thank you for your graciousness in seeing me about the Commonwealth Games, despite your having already given a decision and despite the unique pressure on your timetable. While of course I am sorry that I did not persuade you to see things our way, I completely accept your decision. Subject to the Edinburgh District Council, Edinburgh University and Lothian Regional Council being willing to come to sensible arrangements, I shall do my best to resolve the problems of the Games Company.

It was good of you to let me see a draft of your letter to Mr Sasakawa. As we have already told David Norgrove, I am content with the way you have put it.

With best wishes

Yours sincerely

Mr. Peter Jay

Dear Mr. Sasakawa,

Robert Maxwell came to see me yesterday about the position of the Commonwealth Games Company of which he is Chairman.

He told me about your most generous offer to contribute 300 million Yen to the deficit still faced by the Company, and I should like to record now how much I admire what you are doing to support this great international sporting event. I still recall with enormous pleasure our meeting in Edinburgh while the Games were being held - and the wonderful spirit of international friendship in Meadowbank Stadium that day. Your very generous support for charitable purposes in the United Kingdom is deeply appreciated.

Robert Maxwell urged me to authorise a Government contribution to the Games. I listened very sympathetically to all he had to say, but I had to tell him that I could not do so. I am sure no-one could understand better than you yourself the need to stand firm on matters of principle. The Government of course receives many requests for financial assistance. In the case of the Commonwealth Games we said from the very outset that the event must be run without Government contributions or guarantees. If we were to relax this condition which has been stated so clearly and publicly, and repeated on many occasions, our credibility and authority would be greatly undermined. Robert Maxwell himself fully understands and respects this.

I understand from him that your contribution to the Games Company is conditional upon Mr. Maxwell raising the balance from his own and other resources, including Her Majesty's Government. I do hope you will understand why the Government will not be able to contribute, and that you will not see this as an obstacle to making your own most generous contribution. I know it would greatly help Robert Maxwell in his untiring efforts to wind up the affairs of the Commonwealth Games in good order if you felt able to lift any condition relating to your contribution. And of course it would please me very greatly.

But whatever your decision on that, I do want to thank you most warmly for all you do to help here in the United Kingdom.

Yours sincerely

From the Private Secretary

Dear Robert,

COMMONWEALTH GAMES

I wrote to you earlier today recording the Prime Minister's meeting with Mr. Maxwell. I should perhaps also record the points which Mr. Peter Jay put to me separately before the meeting. The origin of this separate discussion was that Mr. Maxwell claimed last week to have points to put to the Prime Minister which he felt unable to write down. My conversation with Mr. Jay showed nothing of that kind, though he was able to report one or two things which Mr. Maxwell may not have known about last week.

Peter Jay explained that Robert Maxwell and he had in the last few days seen President Moi in Kenya. Mr. Maxwell and President Moi had signed a memorandum of intent to set up a new company which would be jointly owned by Kenyan interests and by Mirror Group Newspapers. The company would help to publish a newspaper, print textbooks and start up a television channel. (Jay gave me a long description of this, though I cannot see its relevance to the Commonwealth Games.)

President Moi had said that he understood that the boycott was not the fault of the Commonwealth Games organisers. He had implied that he would provide money to meet part of the deficit if the UK Government were also prepared to do so, and that he would try to persuade other Commonwealth countries to follow suit. He would be unwilling to provide finance on his own because that would look too much like an admission of guilt.

Peter Jay said that on this basis one option would be for Commonwealth governments and the UK Government to split between them the remaining deficit of £1 million. He said that Mr. Maxwell would be prepared personally to guarantee that the money would be forthcoming from the Commonwealth governments. Jay was not authorised to say what proportion of the £1 million could be expected to be forthcoming from the Commonwealth.

Yours,

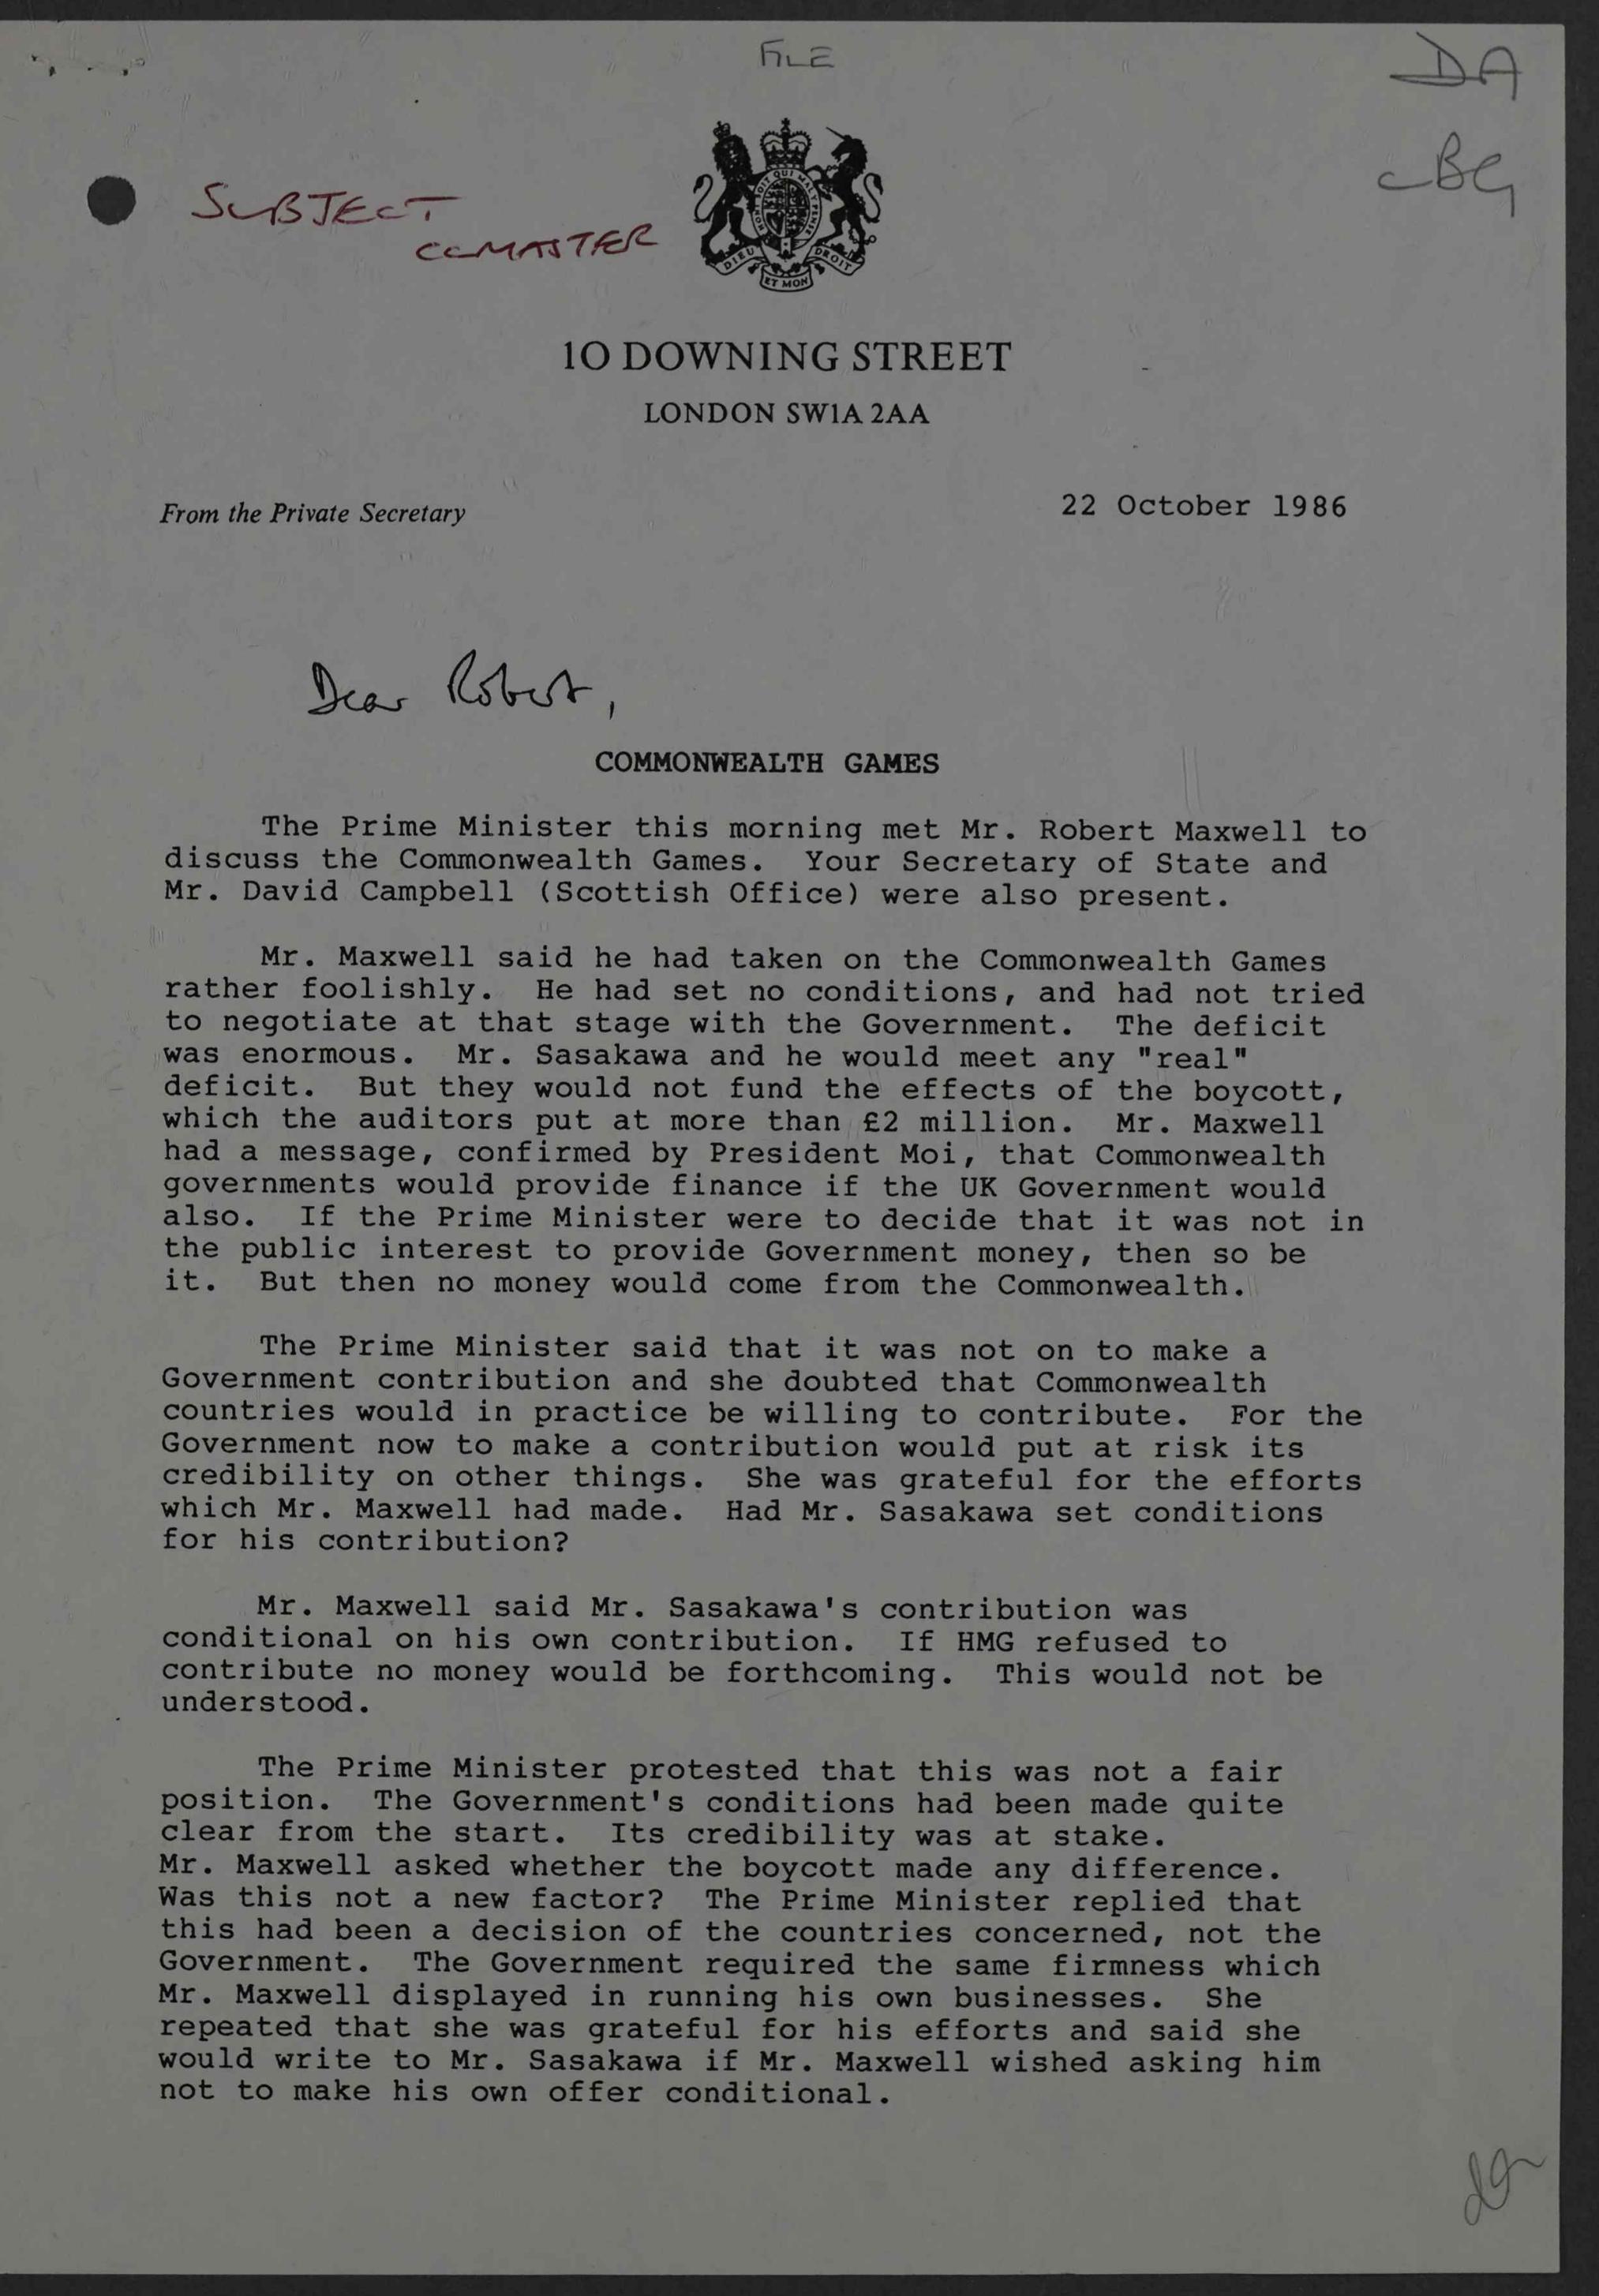

David

(DAVID NORGROVE)

Mr. Maxwell said he admired the Prime Minister's firmness, but suggested that the boycott was a new factor which could enable the Government to change its position. The Prime Minister said the boycott had been on the cards right from the beginning and it had even been recognised very early on that there were reasons which might cause the Games to be cancelled. Some industrialists had been told this when they had spoken to the Prime Minister in the context of a reception she had held for the Commonwealth Games. There was nothing new.

At this point there was a brief discussion of the letter which the Prime Minister would send to Mr. Sasakawa. This would need to be most courteous, saying he would understand that the Government could not go back on its word, Mr. Sasakawa's offer was very generous, that the Prime Minister had heard that there might be conditions but that she urged him not to set such conditions.

In answer to a question from your Secretary of State, Mr. Maxwell said Mr. Sasakawa's contribution was conditional on all parties making a contribution, not just Mr. Sasakawa and himself alone.

Mr. Maxwell thanked the Prime Minister for her kindness and generosity in allowing him this opportunity to put his case. The Prime Minister said she needed to make it absolutely clear that this was a matter of principle and word. Mr. Maxwell interpreted this as, in the simplest words, a matter of a decision which had been given by the Government right at the beginning. The Prime Minister said that if the Government were to go back now they would never be believed on other matters. Mr. Maxwell said it looked then as though the Commonwealth Games would be completed without Government assistance. He could not say that he was not disappointed, but he respected the decision.

I should be grateful for a draft of the letter for the Prime Minister to send to Mr. Sasakawa, as soon as possible.

John,
David.

CONFIDENTIAL

PRIME MINISTERCOMMONWEALTH GAMES

I am seeing Peter Jay at 0845 tomorrow to find out the points which Mr. Maxwell did not feel able to write down.

You have a briefing meeting at 0945 with Mr. Rifkind and Mr. Campbell of the Scottish Office. Mr. Campbell is the "Assessor" who represented the Scottish Office on the Board of the Commonwealth Games Company.

Mr. Maxwell arrives at 1000 and I suggest you keep the meeting strictly to half an hour at most. (Mr. Rifkind has a meeting with Trafalgar House at 1030.)

The papers below repay careful study. The substance seems to me to fall into two parts: first, what the Commonwealth Games organisers were led to expect from the Government and, secondly, what Mr. Maxwell could legitimately have expected when he intervened, as he sees it, to save the Games.

If these papers are complete, there is some doubt, though very little, about the first of these points. The record of a meeting held in 1979 (flag A) shows that the Scottish Office told the organisers that the Government would not provide grants for facilities for the Games and that the Government could not at this stage give any commitment on guarantee (sic). An internal letter written three weeks later (flag B) said it had been made clear by the Scottish Office that "there could be no question of Government grants or guarantee, or of extra resources being made available for the staging of the Games". This of course goes further than the meeting, though the papers do not show whether there had been other meetings or correspondence in the meanwhile. The next letter to the Commonwealth Games organisers, in 1983 (flag C) said that: "the Government gave its backing to Edinburgh making a bid to host the 1986 Games on the understanding that no financial assistance from the Government would be required".

CONFIDENTIAL

Later letters in 1984 and 1985 imply that at that stage no-one was thinking seriously about the position if the Games were to make a loss. Nevertheless, the letter at flag C is unequivocal.

The letter from the Scottish Office at flag D implies that the Government might be prepared to act as "residual guarantor" if there were a real prospect otherwise of cancellation of the Games. But no assurances were given. Mr. Rifkind's first letter, on 30 May 1986, is again specific in saying that the Government's support for the bid had been given on the understanding that there could be no grants from the Government for facilities and that the Government could not give any commitment on a guarantee.

Mr. Maxwell then comes on the scene, in June. Mr. Rifkind made a very clear statement in the House on 15 July (flag E) and from then on all the Government correspondence is quite clear that the Government had all along said that there would be no contributions from Government funds and no guarantees.

Mr. Maxwell appears to acknowledge the Government's public position. But he has made two points about the Government's private position on which I suggest you should concentrate at your pre-meeting with Mr. Rifkind and Mr. Campbell.

They are:

- (i) he claims (flag F) that Mr. Campbell discouraged some of the Directors from resigning from the Board in June 1986, and that the Directors interpreted this as tacit Government support for their continued efforts;
- (ii) he also argues (flag G) that he received from Mr. Rifkind an assurance that "whilst the Government's policy of no assistance to the Games from public funds remained, if at the end of the day there is a shortfall in the company's finances, he will try to persuade his colleagues that the Government should then do what it can".

CONFIDENTIAL

The first of these points is neither here nor there. The Directors should have come to no such assumption and given the importance of the issue, if they felt that this was the signal the Government was seeking to give, they should have asked the question outright. Mr. Rifkind and his Private Secretary deny the second point. But even if they did not, Mr. Rifkind only undertook to try to persuade his colleagues: he did not commit the Government.

Overall, I conclude that you can be robust in your defence of the Government's position.

The briefing from the Scottish Office is itself robust.

You have begun to receive letters from creditors. The three enclosed were written within three days and it would be surprising indeed if a campaign were not now getting underway.

The essential points are:

- (i) the organisers and Mr. Maxwell knew that the Government would provide no money;
- (ii) that remains the position;
- (iii) the organisers also knew that there must be a high risk of political boycotts, if not relating to South Africa, then for some other reason;
- (iv) the boycott which took place was none of the Government's making;
- (v) you recognise that this will be disappointing to the creditors and others, but Mr. Maxwell himself must and should recognise that the Government's own credibility would be damaged if it were to change its position now.

MEETING OF THE PRIME MINISTER AND THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR SCOTLAND WITH MR ROBERT MAXWELL: 22 OCTOBER

BRIEFING NOTES

1. SUCCESS OF THE GAMES

Line to take

I CONGRATULATE YOU ON YOUR CONTRIBUTION TO THE SUCCESS OF THE EDINBURGH GAMES.

Background

Mr Maxwell took over Commonwealth Games (Scotland 1986) Limited in June when confidence was at a low ebb. He restored financial credibility and brought in high calibre advisers. He has been at some pains in his letters and in the Company's minutes to make it appear that the Games would otherwise have collapsed. The previous Chairman and Directors were however looking for a cash injection rather than a takeover. It is reasonable to assume that they would have been able to make a success of the Games on this basis. Mr Maxwell contributed to media interest as far as the popular Press is concerned without appearing to have made a decisive impact. The Games were a substantial media success on television: but the credit here goes to the BBC as host broadcaster.

2. THERE WAS GOOD REASON TO EXPECT GOVERNMENT HELP

Line to take

AT THE TIME OF YOUR INTERVENTION YOU STRESSED YOUR INTENTION TO RESOLVE THE ORGANISERS' FINANCIAL DIFFICULTIES. GOVERNMENT POLICY WAS EXPLAINED TO YOU PERSONALLY BY A CABINET MINISTER (MALCOLM RIFKIND) AND BY THE MINISTER THEN RESPONSIBLE FOR SPORT IN THE SCOTTISH OFFICE (ALLAN STEWART). IN ASSUMING THAT YOU WOULD BE ABLE TO PERSUADE HMG TO CHANGE POLICY YOU MADE A MISJUDGMENT FOR WHICH THE RESPONSIBILITY IS ENTIRELY YOUR OWN.

Background

Mr Maxwell has never claimed that he had any commitment or hint to the effect that Government policy would actually be changed. He has, however, consistently tried to extract commitment of "insurer of last resort" from HMG; and he has attempted to insinuate that these attempts imply a greater government readiness to review policy than has ever been the case. His letter of 31 July to Mr Rifkind acknowledged that "the Government has made clear on numerous occasions that no central public funds would be available". His claims that undertakings were given to review policy have been categorically rejected in writing.

3. THE PUBLIC INTEREST WOULD BE SERVED BY A CHANGE OF POLICY

Line to take

THERE IS A SUBSTANTIAL PUBLIC INTEREST IN THE COMMONWEALTH GAMES. THAT IS WHY THE GOVERNMENT BACKED EDINBURGH'S BID. BUT WE DID SO ON THE CLEARLY UNDERSTOOD BASIS OF NO FINANCIAL COMMITMENT. WE ARE SATISFIED THAT THE BALANCE OF PUBLIC INTEREST LIES IN MAINTAINING THIS POLICY.

Background

This fundamental policy issue has been tested and agreed in four rounds of inter-Ministerial correspondence.

4. THE GAMES WERE HIT BY DEVELOPMENTS OUTSIDE OUR CONTROL SUCH AS THE BOYCOTT AND THE HIGH COST OF SECURITY

Line to take

POLITICAL BOYCOTTS AND COSTLY SECURITY REQUIREMENTS HAVE BEEN A FACT OF LIFE FOR MAJOR SPORTING EVENTS FOR MANY YEARS. THE GOVERNMENT DID EVERYTHING IN ITS POWER TO PREVENT THE BOYCOTT OF EDINBURGH FROM SPREADING.

Background

The Commonwealth Games are chronically vulnerable to boycott on the issue of sporting contacts with South Africa. Fund-raising for the Edinburgh Games had many setbacks as a result. It is however the case that when Mr Maxwell took over these difficulties appeared to be in the past. The fact that the recommendations of the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group were not to be reviewed until after the Games appeared to remove the danger of a boycott in the very quarter from which it eventually materialised. The organisers believe they are entitled to government sympathy over the high cost of security but this, even more than boycotts, is a factor for which they should have been well able to plan in advance.

5. THE FINANCIAL GAP IS SMALL

Line to take

IT IS A CREDITABLE ACHIEVEMENT TO HAVE REDUCED THE FUNDING DEFICIT TO £1 MILLION. WITH YOUR OWN FINANCIAL RESOURCES AND EXPERTISE YOU SHOULD BE ABLE TO CLOSE THAT GAP. IT MIGHT BE

MORE COST-EFFECTIVE TO DO SO THAN TO HAVE TO CONTINUE DEVOTING SO MUCH OF YOUR ENERGIES TO THE GAMES.

Background

Mr Maxwell's overall view of the financial position is set out in his letter to the Prime Minister. The underlying figures are: total expenditure £15 million (assuming that "inflated and unmerited items" can be eliminated); total income £11.5 million; deficit £3.5 million. This is very much where the Company were when Mr Maxwell took over. It is impossible to say how reliable Mr Maxwell's figures are. Accounts, although available, have not been submitted to the Directors. Financial Reports prepared by Coopers and Lybrand have been distributed at Directors' meetings only for the agenda item concerned, scanned extremely rapidly and then withdrawn as being too confidential to be allowed outside the boardroom. Copies of some Financial Reports have been made available to the Scottish Office and support the analysis submitted by Mr Maxwell to the Prime Minister. There is no reason to disbelieve the main conclusions drawn by reputable consultants. A number of uncertainties nevertheless emerge. Income estimates have fluctuated widely. Expenditure provision appears to contain uncertainties (such as the assumption that the creditors concerned will accept that certain items are correctly described as "inflated and unmerited"). At the end of the day the gap will be determined by whatever arrangement creditors will accept in the light of the funds at Mr Maxwell's disposal with or without a Government contribution.

6. THE FAILURE OF BIRMINGHAM'S OLYMPIC BID HAS CHANGED THE SITUATION

Line to take

THERE ARE MANY COMPANIES WHICH LOOK TO THE GOVERNMENT FOR SUBSIDIES. THE LINE HAS BEEN DRAWN QUITE CLEARLY AS FAR AS BOTH BIRMINGHAM AND EDINBURGH ARE CONCERNED.

Background

Mr Maxwell is unlikely to press this point with any real confidence. He admitted to the Directors at a meeting in Edinburgh on 13 October that it was the general policy of the Government towards private sector subsidies rather than Birmingham's bid which underlay the Government's refusal to contribute to the Edinburgh Games.

7. THE PUBLIC EXPECT THE GOVERNMENT TO CONTRIBUTE

Line to take

THE PUBLIC UNDERSTAND GOVERNMENT POLICY AS WELL AS YOU DO. YOUR INTERVENTION IN THE GAMES WAS WIDELY PERCEIVED AS A FINANCIAL RESCUE AND IT IS TO YOU THEY WILL LOOK NOW.

Background

Public perceptions are mixed. The Scottish media (with the exception of Mirror Group papers) are generally hostile to Mr Maxwell. But they also argue that Scottish interests will be damaged by a collapse of the Games Company and that the Government should act to prevent this. Opposition politicians, especially in the SNP, can be expected to exploit this issue.

8. MANY SMALL BUSINESSES IN SCOTLAND WILL SUFFER IF THE COMPANY GOES BROKE

Line to take

WE LOOK TO YOU TO DISCHARGE YOUR RESPONSIBILITIES TO ALL YOUR CREDITORS.

Background

A strong lobby is being mounted against the Government by creditors. The policy of the Games Company has been to pay all small creditors (owed £5,000 and under) in full; to pay medium creditors one-third on account; and to negotiate with the handful of major creditors who will not face liquidation even if they are not paid. It is expected that some small and medium-sized firms and their subcontractors will be forced into liquidation if the Games Company collapses. Many more will suffer loss and have to lay off staff. The Games Company may be able to make an assessment of how extensive or significant the damage might be. To ask Mr Maxwell to provide more precise details however would encourage him to try and spin out what he would have an interest in implying were negotiations.

9. DIRECTORS INCLUDE LEADING SCOTTISH PUBLIC FIGURES WHOSE REPUTATIONS WILL SUFFER IF THE COMPANY COLLAPSES

Line to take

I WOULD EXPECT ANY CRITICISM TO CENTRE ON THE DIRECTORS' JUDGMENT IN VOTING YOU ONTO THE BOARD IN ORDER TO SAVE THE COMPANY.

10. OTHERS SHOULD TAKE THE BLAME, ESPECIALLY THE PREVIOUS LEADERSHIP OF THE COMPANY AND EDINBURGH DISTRICT COUNCIL

Line to take

FOR A COMPANY RELYING ALMOST ENTIRELY ON VOLUNTARY EFFORT THE GAMES COMPANY WAS IN GOOD HEART AND PULLING TOGETHER WELL AT THE TIME OF YOUR TAKEOVER. THEIR DIFFICULTIES WERE FINANCIAL. YOU UNDERTOOK TO SOLVE THESE DIFFICULTIES. IT IS TOO LATE TO TRY AND AVOID THIS RESPONSIBILITY NOW.

Background

Mr Maxwell has prepared scapegoats in case of failure. Some of his criticism of the competence of his colleagues and of the grudging attitude to the Games adopted by the City Fathers are well founded. An organisation consisting almost entirely of volunteers however is bound to have some weaknesses. Mr Maxwell has not been able to solve the organisers' financial problems; and there is no reason to suppose that his predecessors would not have been able to run the Games themselves if these difficulties had been overcome. In certain respects such as the administration of the Games village, the previous organisers showed striking competence.

11. THERE ARE VARIOUS INDIRECT WAYS IN WHICH THE GOVERNMENT COULD MAKE A CONTRIBUTION WITHOUT APPEARING TO DO A U-TURN

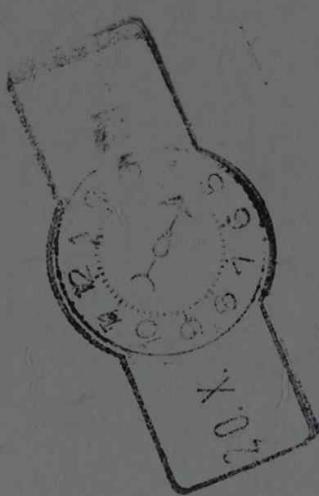

Line to take

WE ARE NOT PREPARED TO CONTEMPLATE SUCH DEVICES.

Background

The organisers have produced fertile ideas for hidden Government subsidies. for example through the Scottish Sports Council or the Royal Mint. All of these devices would be transparent and would set awkward precedents.

Dear Bob,

You wrote to me on 31 July seeking help with the residual deficit that you expect Commonwealth Games (Scotland 1986) Limited to have to meet after the outcome of the various initiatives described in your letter was known.

I am writing to let you know that after the most careful consideration of your proposals I have concluded that government assistance cannot be justified. As your letter acknowledges, the government has made it clear on numerous occasions that no central government funds would be available for the Games. There has never been any uncertainty as to government policy and nothing in your letter persuades me that it would be right to depart from it.

Dear Mr Jay

Thank you for your letter of 15 August addressed to Mr Robbie.

Neither the Secretary of State nor I have any recollection of an assurance to Mr Maxwell in the terms quoted in your letter when Mr Maxwell undertook the task of rescuing the Games Company. There is therefore no question of Mr Rifkind resiling from an understanding with Mr Maxwell.

Yours sincerely

Dear Councillor Lazarowicz,

I am replying on behalf of the Secretary of State to your letter of 6 August.

I am afraid that your letter displays a basic misunderstanding of the position. When the Games Organisation accepted responsibility for the 1986 Games, it was on the clear understanding that the Games would be financed without any contribution or guarantees from central government funds. There is therefore no question of the Games having a right, as you suggest, to expect Government support.

Dear Mr Rifkind

I am writing with regard to the financial situation of the Commonwealth Games. You will be aware of the increasing concern at the likely deficit facing the Games Organisation at this stage. I am writing to express my support for the approaches which I believe have already been made to you by the Commonwealth Games Organisation seeking that the Government should meet the deficit which is likely to be incurred for the staging of the event.

So far, as you will be aware, the Government has given no financial support to assist the Games Organisation in mounting an event which was clearly of international significance and one which therefore had every right to expect Government support. The refusal of the Government so far to give any financial support is in marked contrast to the situation which applied, for example, in the Los Angeles Olympics when considerable support was forthcoming from governmental sources; and indeed the British Government has indicated that it would give a level of financial support or guarantee for the 1992 Olympics if they were to be held in London or Birmingham. In particular, I would ask you to give serious consideration to meeting the costs of the major security operation which had to be mounted at Games venues and at the Games village.

The people of Scotland have already responded magnificently to the financial appeals organised in support of the Games, and showed through the packed attendances at the Games events their appreciation that this major international event was taking place in Scotland. I ask you to give recognition to this support by providing the necessary financial resources to enable the Games Organisation to meet all the remaining calls upon its funds.

Yours sincerely

15th August, 1986,

Dear Mr Robbie,

Thank you for your letter of 14th August, 1986.

Mr Maxwell has asked me to say that he has a record of the assurance which he received from the Secretary of State before he undertook the onerous task of rescuing the Games Company that, whilst the Government's policy of no assistance to the Games from public funds remained, if at the end of the day there is a shortfall in the Company's finances, he will try to persuade his colleagues that the Government should then do what it can.

If your letter means that the Secretary of State is now resiling from that understanding, then the Games Company must be put into immediate liquidation; and the minutes of the meetings, the correspondence, including this letter, and other material papers will have to be published.

Yours,

Peter Jay,

As I told you this morning the Secretary of State is sorry that he could not agree to break his leave to see Mr Maxwell. Apart from the considerable practical difficulties involved, he felt that to do so would imply that the Government was preparing to change policy. He has asked me to say that it would be most unwise for the company to proceed in this expectation; and that any impression they may be giving to this effect, whether intended or not, is unwarranted. As Mr Maxwell's letter of 31 July acknowledges, the Government has made it clear on numerous occasions that no central government funds would be available for the Games.

Mr Rifkind will reply to Mr Maxwell's letter of 31 July soon after his return from holiday. In view of the postscript to the letter we are treating it as strictly confidential. If its contents become known we will draw on this letter in answering enquiries.

Dear Malcolm,

REPORT TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR SCOTLAND
BY THE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF
COMMONWEALTH GAMES (SCOTLAND 1986) LIMITED
CONCERNING THE COMPANY'S POSITION

Following the meeting of the board of directors on Thursday 24 July 1986, I am writing with the knowledge of my board to advise you of the current position of Commonwealth Games (Scotland 1986) Limited ("CGSL") and to make proposals to obtain certain assurances. If obtained, these will ensure that the company can continue to meet its obligations and, in due course, pay its small and medium sized creditors in full and subsequently the large ones as well subject to the other proposals set out in this paper.

This report is set out under the following principal headings:

1. Background
2. Summary of Problems
3. Current Position
4. Proposal

1. Background:

In 1978 Edinburgh was awarded the position of host to the 1986 Commonwealth Games. In order to prepare for the Games an organising committee was formed under the then Lord Provost, Mr Kenneth Borthwick.

At the outset, and since, the Government has made it clear on numerous occasions to the Games Organising Committee that no central public funds would be available to stage these Games. All funding was to be raised from local government and a variety of private sources. This had not previously been attempted either in the United Kingdom or elsewhere, apart from the last Olympics at Los Angeles. On 21 December 1982 the Organising Committee formed this company to undertake the contractual obligations necessary to stage the Games.

2. Summary of Problems:

I set out below a brief commentary on each of the main problems which faced the organisers of the Games and which have a bearing on the present situation facing the company.

(a) Organisation -

CGSL established an organisation which reflected the previous experience of those charged with staging the Games. Committees were formed to handle each of the various matters which had to be attended to. A chairman was appointed to each committee. Most of these committees carried out their tasks through an executive officer who was a fulltime employee of CGSL. These executive officers were, in the main, retired or seconded local government officers. Unfortunately, the duties and responsibilities of these executives were mainly determined by their committees, made up of part time and retired private individuals, rather than the necessary central CGSL executive direction.

In the first half of 1984 it was found that this organisation was inappropriate to a commercially funded operation. In August 1984 the board appointed a chief executive, Mr Blair Grosset (a retired former local government financial officer), to take overall responsibility for the management of the company. However very little of the previous established modus operandi changed and no effective central direction was established to plan, coordinate and implement the preparations for the Games in the needed professionally managed manner.

(b) Resource Limitations - the Scottish Dimension -

The 1986 Commonwealth Games were expected to be the biggest yet staged. The extent of the facilities necessary was underestimated and initially it was not appreciated that without central government support the resources available in Edinburgh and in Scotland were inadequate to meet the demands on the organisation. For example, the rules of the Commonwealth Games Federation state that fund raising should be confined to the host country. Astonishingly, it only gradually dawned on the Games Organising Committee that Scotland, on its own, did not have the capacity to fund such a major international event on the stipulated basis.

When this lack of resources was recognised, CGSL belatedly sought assistance from outside Scotland. Initially there was some opposition to this course of action from the English, Welsh and Northern Irish Commonwealth Games Councils which frustrated the company's efforts. These conflicts took time and effort to resolve and thus added further to the burdens facing the organisers. This episode alone underlines the amateurish approach by the Scottish side to this immense problem.

(c) Marketing and Publicity -

There has been a major failure in publicising the 1986 Commonwealth Games in Scotland and throughout the UK. There has been an alarming lack of awareness and apathy about the Games amongst the public and in the business community. This has clearly contributed to the failure by the various fund raising activities to meet their original projected targets.

Despite employing paid professional PR consultants, a major failing has been the lack of a comprehensive public relations and publicity plan from the start. For example, no attempt was made to brief the media in Scotland or London on a regular basis. Industry and commerce have not been effectively harnessed to support the activities of the company. Such publicity as was arranged was often only locally orientated and there was little or no attempt to promote the company or the Games nationally through Fleet Street or internationally.

(d) Fund Raising -

CGSL sub-contracted the main fund raising activity to C G Consortium Limited, a joint venture between Saatchi & Saatchi and Arthur Young ("the Consortium") which was formed for the purpose. Their original target was to raise £15 million from sponsorship and other activities such as the sale of commemorative coins. Twelve months ago, the Consortium advised the company that they expected to generate around £12 million with a minimum projection of £8 million. This minimum figure was raised by the Consortium to £9.5 million in December 1985 and they now admit that this was an error of judgement on their part. Notwithstanding the fact that the Consortium and the Board knew that their income projections were optimistic, CGSL nevertheless continued to plan and incur expenditure in line with the Consortium's optimistic projections.

CGSL, having sub-contracted the commercial exploitation of the Games, failed to monitor and supervise the performance of the Consortium and to amend its expenditure plans to match the falling revenue expectations.

The Consortium now admits that it consistently adopted an over-optimistic view of the prospects which incredibly seems to have been based largely on the experiences of the Los Angeles Olympic Games. On that occasion, a substantial portion of the sponsorship income was raised in the 6 months immediately prior to the event.

However, Los Angeles had covered its basic running costs from ticket money and the sale of broadcasting rights for several hundred million dollars. CGSL sold the broadcasting rights for the 1986 Commonwealth Games to the BBC for only £500,000, with ticket sales estimated at £1,250,000! Consequently, Edinburgh depended on sponsorship to cover the bulk of the costs.

(e) Competitors -

The 1986 Edinburgh Games were expected to be the largest Commonwealth Games held to date, both in terms of countries participating, approximately 55, and the number of competitors entered, approximately 3,400. Initially, CGSL underestimated the potential numbers of athletes and officials who were expected to attend. The rules of the Games did not require countries to finalise their entries until early July 1986. As a result, some of the assumptions made earlier proved unrealistic and when these were revised the planned resources available to the company became over-stretched. This situation affected the detailed planning exercise and resulted in the company incurring substantial additional expenditure. In consequence the original budget of approximately £7 million for staging the Games rose to £13.1 million in the summer and has now increased to £15 million.

(f) The Boycott -

The effect of the boycott of the Games, by over 32 countries, has been catastrophic. The company has had to enter into commitments to ensure that the Games were staged on time, for example to prepare venues for each sport. There has been virtually no opportunity at this late stage to curtail expenditure.

In addition, the boycott has had a totally detrimental impact on the company's and my personal last minute fundraising efforts. A number of potential sponsors have withdrawn from discussions and others have reduced their previously firm commitments.

(g) Government position -

There has been uncertainty over the Government's attitude to the funding difficulties in the prevailing circumstances since 1982. The Scottish Office has been kept fully informed of all developments through the participation of its Assessor, Mr Campbell, an under secretary at the Scottish Education Department, at the company's board meetings. However, there has been considerable frustration and doubt to the extent that during June 1986, when several of the directors realised that a significant deficit could potentially arise, they intimated their desire to resign from the Board. In the event, no resignations occurred, largely as a result of informal advice from the Assessor that this would be a gross over-reaction and could only result in the collapse of the company. Rightly or wrongly, directors of CGSL interpreted this as tacit Governmental support for their continued efforts.

(h) Summary -

Clearly, in the organisation of the 1986 Games, a number of grave misjudgements have occurred and serious mistakes made:

- (a) Throughout the period of preparation, there has been a lack of effective management control over the physical preparations and over financial commitments and exposure. For example a financial controller was not appointed until late 1985.
- (b) The Games organising committee failed to appreciate at the outset that without Central Governmental support the financial resources available within Scotland would be wholly inadequate to meet the cost of staging the Games at the level required.
- (c) The failure of the Consortium to meet their own target was not recognised by the board until it was too late. Inadequate control was exercised over the other fund raising activities resulting in unnecessary expenditure and waste.
- (d) An atmosphere of undue optimism has prevailed when the warning signs were clear for all to see.

Despite these difficulties, self induced and due to external circumstances, preparations for the Games are complete and they have been opened on schedule, which is a remarkable achievement for which all concerned can be proud.

3. Current Position:

On 19 June 1986, the Board of CGSL invited me to assume the chairmanship of the company. I accepted this onerous task simply because the alternative as was put to me of the immediate appointment of a Receiver with the national humiliation that this would bring both to Scotland and to the UK. Before accepting the office I telephoned you and whilst you confirmed the Government's line that no central government funds would be made available to the Games, you did assure me that if after all my efforts there was still to be a deficit, you will agree to consider my proposals.

I deputed my colleague, Mr Bryan Cowgill, Deputy Chairman of Mirror Group Newspapers, to take over the executive vice-chairmanship of the company on a full-time basis, in order to ensure that the Games opened on time, are a credit of Scotland and the U.K. as a whole and are concluded successfully. He took action to strengthen management weaknesses and establish effective financial control.

I appointed Coopers & Lybrand to provide financial monitoring services for which MGN Ltd will be paying approximately £100,000, a charge which will not fall on the Games company.

My appointment helped to provide the confidence factor that enabled the company to complete all the preparations in time for the opening.

The latest financial forecast indicates that the Games are expected to cost £15 million. Most of this sum has now been committed. The company has raised, or expects to raise during the period of the Games, approximately £5 million which, together with the estimated £6.2 million receipt from the Consortium, gives total income to date of £11.2 million.

Thus, present projections indicate a potential deficit of £3.8 million. I and the new executive team is making, and will continue to make, every effort to reduce this shortfall through rigorous control over expenditure and by instigating new fundraising activities, which include:

- (a) A national appeal backed by most of Fleet Street's papers, as well as by the Daily Record, Sunday Mail, Scotsman, Edinburgh Evening News and the DC Thomson papers.
- (b) Media committees have been established under the chairmanship of David Stevens, Chairman of United Newspapers, London, and Mr Nimmo, Editor of the Edinburgh Evening News in Scotland, with whose assistance the national awareness of, and support for, the Games has been raised successfully. This has contributed greatly to getting the national appeal for monetary support launched which has so far raised approximately £250,000.
- (c) In spite of the boycott difficulties, I have been able to raise approximately £1 million in additional sponsorship in cash for the Games. Of this sum £250,000 comes from Mirror Group Newspapers. This does not include the costs of staff seconded to the Games and approximately £1 million of advertising pages published in the Daily Record, Sunday Mail, Daily Mirror, Sunday Mirror and The People.
- (d) The appointment of an experienced executive staff to take immediate and effective action on the numerous fronts that were needed to ensure that preparations were completed on time for the launch and orderly conduct and administration of the event.

It is too early to quantify the outcome of all of these new initiatives, some of which have yet to be launched.

4. Proposal:

As mentioned above, on our present projections, there will be a shortfall of £3.8 million in funding the Games. My proposals for dealing with this are:

- (a) to continue our various fundraising activities described above;
- (b) to obtain further contributions from the major commercial supporters of the Games, both in money and in kind; and

- (c) to secure from the Government an undertaking that any remaining deficit will be met from central funds. This is expected to be approximately £2 million and shall not exceed £2.5 million.

On this basis, I expect that CGSL will be able, in due course, to meet its obligations to its creditors, the vast majority of whom are small and medium sized Scottish local companies who cannot afford to sustain the size of loss that could be involved.

In the absence of such an understanding in principle, nobody else will be prepared to make the necessary sacrifice. The unpalatable alternative, largely brought about by the boycott, can only be for the directors to consider their responsibilities now. These must include putting the company into immediate liquidation. In those circumstances it is clear that the suppliers to and creditors of the Commonwealth Games will suffer total loss.

I would be pleased to provide any further information which you may require.

Yours ever

R.M.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Oral/Letter.

Mr. Rippon asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will arrange for Her Majesty's Government to make a contribution to the expenses of the Commonwealth games deducting the cost from aid currently earmarked for Commonwealth countries who have boycotted the games.

Mr. Allan Stewart: It is for the organisers to assess the financial implications of the last minute withdrawals from the Commonwealth Games. The organisers have not asked for Government financial assistance. My right hon. and learned Friend and I congratulate them on their determination to make the games a financial success.

properly for human rights in South Africa to be sure that they fully observe the same principles in their own country.

Mr. Gordon Wilson (Dundee, East): Does the Secretary of State realise that there is a danger of further withdrawals of Commonwealth countries from the games because of the Prime Minister's attitude? As Scotland's representative—or so he claims—will he write to all Commonwealth countries to explain that the Scottish people were not responsible for the election of the Government or the Prime Minister and to dissociate the Scottish people from the pro-apartheid views held by the Prime Minister?

Mr. Rifkind: The vast majority of the Scottish people do not believe that the Commonwealth Games should be used as a method of blackmail on issues of national policy. I hope that the hon. Gentleman shares that view. I remind the hon. Gentleman that while we are delighted that the Commonwealth Games are to be held in Edinburgh, the games do not belong to Scotland or to the United Kingdom; they are the games of the Commonwealth, they are being hosted in Scotland, and that is a matter of great pleasure to us.

Mr. Michael Forsyth (Stirling): Will my right hon. and learned Friend confirm that the vast majority of people in Scotland are sick to death of politics intervening in sport? Does he agree that the five African countries which have sought the high moral political ground have a disgraceful record on human rights? All those countries practice political repression and detention without trial. Is it not time that we began to highlight that rather than allow those countries to steal the limelight?

Mr. Rifkind: It is not simply the Scottish people who regret the politicisation of these games by certain countries. The athletes of the countries concerned must also bitterly regret the decisions announced by their respective Governments. Even at this late stage, I hope that the five countries involved will reconsider their decisions and realise that the Commonwealth Games will help to further the multiracial ideal and that any damage to the Commonwealth Games will badly affect that ideal.

Mr. Tom Clarke (Monklands, West): Does the Secretary of State recall that when Mr. Gandhi succeeded his mother as Prime Minister, our Prime Minister and the right hon. and learned Gentleman the Secretary of State, then at the Foreign Office, gave glowing tributes to him? Does the Secretary of State think that Mr. Gandhi has changed since then? Are not the words of such a distinguished international statesman important? Is the right hon. and learned Gentleman simply casting them aside?

Mr. Rifkind: I entirely endorse the view that the Indian Prime Minister is a distinguished statesman. That does not require me to say that we must necessarily agree with all the opinions that he holds. The same could be said of other statesmen in various countries.

Mr. Barry Henderson (Fife, North-East): Is my right hon. and learned Friend aware that many people welcome that part of the statement and the earlier comments of the Prime Minister that emphasise that the Commonwealth Games Federation is independent of the Government in this country? That would be welcomed in other countries that are not democracies in the free sense that we understand the word. Will he confirm to the world and to those coming to Edinburgh from the Commonwealth that regardless of colour, creed, race, nationality or the politics of their Government, they will be welcome to tour around Scotland after they have enjoyed the games?

Mr. Rifkind: That is very much the case. I endorse my hon. Friend's comment that it would be highly desirable if the Commonwealth Games Federation could be as independent in the exercise of its discretion in every other Commonwealth country as it is in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Tam Dalyell (Linlithgow): In reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar), the Secretary of State said that he was confident about where finance for the games would come from. He changed that a little in answer to the hon. Member for Inverness, Nairn and Lochaber (Sir R. Johnston) when he said that he was confident that there was every prospect of funds being found. As I have attended many meetings of the main organising committee, which is extremely worried about finance, may I ask the Secretary of State where the shortfall is to come from? What basis does the Secretary of State have for confidence that the money will be forthcoming? It is jolly difficult at present to raise money.

Mr. Rifkind: There may be certain difficulties, but a high proportion of the necessary funding has already been raised. Those responsible for raising finance have expressed confidence in their ability to raise the remaining sums. In the past few days they have launched a number of important new initiatives, and I have no reason at present to believe that they will be other than successful.

Mr. Eric Forth (Mid-Worcestershire): Does my right hon. and learned Friend agree that if the internal political and domestic arrangements of countries are to become the criteria for participation by sportsmen in international sporting events, we would do well to direct people's attention to military regimes and one-party undemocratic states which are prepared to send athletes to international sporting events and to criticise the internal political arrangements of other states? Does he agree that it is high time that there was consistency in these matters before they are taken further?

Mr. Rifkind: I share my hon. Friend's aspiration for consistency. I am not as confident as he is in our ability to achieve that.

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton (Fife, Central): Does the Secretary of State accept that even those Commonwealth countries which intend to participate in the games disagree violently with the Prime Minister's views on sanctions and South Africa? Is it therefore not clear that the damage that will be done to the Commonwealth will be achieved not by a gesture vis-a-vis the games but in other ways? Does he disagree in principle with Government financial assistance for the games?

Mr. Rifkind: On the hon. Gentleman's latter point, I have made it clear that the Government have all along said that the decision to hold the games in Scotland was taken on the basis that there would be no request for Government funding. That position has been repeated on many occasions. I welcome the hon. Gentleman's observation that it is possible to have different views on sanctions against South Africa and still feel it proper to participate in the games. That view is clearly shared on both sides of

Dear Ken,

Thank you for your letters of 13 and 26 May about the finances of the XIII Commonwealth Games.

My predecessor's support for the bid to hold the 1986 Games in Edinburgh was given on the understanding that there could be no grants from Government to provide facilities for the Games and that the Government could not give any commitment on a guarantee. You should pursue the other sources of potential support mentioned in your letter, including your main backers who have a direct financial stake in the Games and those who accepted the principle of providing financial guarantees at the time of the bid. I am glad to note that you see prospects of a satisfactory response from these quarters.

I have every confidence that your financial difficulties will be surmounted and the Games held successfully. I should be grateful however if I could be kept in close touch, through my assessor, about developments. Please ensure that in the final run up to the Games we obtain regular documentation about the financial position, including all necessary budgetary information and regular statements on the latest forecasts of income from all sources.

Dear Blair
COMMONWEALTH GAMES

Thank you for your two letters of 1 May about the prospects of Government help towards the financing of the Commonwealth Games.

I am not entirely sure what construction to place on the figures which you indicate, particularly since you already have a guarantee from Edinburgh District Council which goes some way to meet your needs. But the central point of my reply must be that, as I explained when I saw you and Jim Souness on 10 April, any approach to Government to reverse its consistent position against becoming financially involved in the mounting of the Games must come at the political level from your Chairman on behalf of himself and his fellow Directors. I also repeat the advice I offered that the presumption is so strongly against such a radical change of policy by the Government that I would see no prospect of it accepting the role of "residual guarantor" unless this approach was made in a situation where there was a real prospect of cancellation of the Games. It goes without saying that an approach should not be contemplated until all other sources of support had been tried. There is no prospect of an indirect Government subsidy, for example through the Royal Mint, as suggested in your second letter.

We remain ready to try and help you and the Consortium to open negotiations with companies whose support might have been expected but has not so far materialised, as discussed at our meeting on 10 April. I understand that you have now provided David Campbell with a list of the kind we discussed then.

I am sending a copy of this letter to your Chairman, Ken Borthwick.

Dear Sir,

The Secretary of State has asked me to thank you for your letter of 15 May about the 1986 Commonwealth Games.

Rey A.
The Secretary of State is sorry to see that there appears to be a misconception about the basis on which he agreed to support Edinburgh's bid to host the Games. In order to remove this he has asked me to send you, for consideration by your Council, a copy of the minutes of the meeting held on 4 October 1979 to discuss the Council's bid. Your Council will note that its representative, the then Director of Recreation, said that "the facilities required for the Games (with the exception of a suitable shooting range) already existed and would be upgraded as necessary within the District Council's normal allocation". It was on this understanding that the Secretary of State lent his support for the City's subsequently successful bid.

Although the position remains that no further capital resources are available over and above the allocations already issued, these allocations can of course be enhanced by any capital receipts raised by the Council through the disposal of land and property. Your Council may therefore wish to consider this possible means of boosting their total capital programme. Both this and the eventual choice of projects within the total programme lie within the Council's discretion.

Finally the Secretary of State has asked me to emphasise to your Council that no courtesy is implied in the fact that he has asked me to write this letter on his behalf. This is a normal procedure. The Secretary of State's support for the District Council as hosts for the 1986 Commonwealth Games remains unchanged.

A separate reply will be sent to Councillor Lazarowicz' letter of 7 June about the velodrome project.

THE XIII COMMONWEALTH GAMES 1986

The current furore over the Olympic Games prompts me to write to you about my concern about prospects for the Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh two years hence.

The last time we spoke about this subject was in the House when you asked if we might be able to persuade the Scottish Rugby Union to exercise a restraining influence over the plans of their English colleagues to tour South Africa. We looked into the position with the Scottish Rugby Union and while their attitude on apartheid was generally helpful they did not feel they could exercise any influence over England in a subject which had become so fraught with emotion.

The English tour has of course caused a great deal of damaging speculation about the possibility of ~~the~~ exclusion of England from the Edinburgh Games which has already prejudiced the ability of the organisers to obtain sponsorship. I now expect a formal approach from the Executive Committee warning us that a Government guarantee may be necessary if the Games are to go ahead. Our officials are already in close touch about this problem and we will consult you before taking any formal position. Prospects should be much clearer after the Olympics have taken place and I intend to adopt a cautious attitude in the meantime.

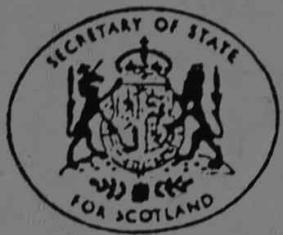

The election of a Labour-controlled District Council in Edinburgh may also add to the troubles of the organisers of the 1986 Games. There was already some strain between them and the old Conservative-controlled Council. The new ruling group have exacerbated this by proclaiming that they wish to see England excluded from the Games and intend to impose District Council control over the organising committee. Much of this may be sheer political posturing and misunderstanding. It has however already caused a hardening of attitudes. Given time, common sense should prevail; the trouble is however that time is now at a premium. There is no formal agreement between the organisers and the District about the facilities needed for the Games and important decisions are now urgently required if everything is to be ready in good order and on time. The hotheads in the new Council may well be tempted to insist on their point of view thus casting further doubt on the viability of the Games and undermining even more seriously the prospects of sponsorship. The Government could end up as a convenient whipping-boy to both sides if things go wrong.

I do not want to sound alarmist or to suggest that we should intervene at this stage. On the contrary I am sure that in public we should remain disengaged and maintain a confident front.

I should be grateful if our officials could remain in close touch over the full range of issues.

I am copying this letter to Malcolm Rifkind, John Stradling-Thomas and Nicholas Scott.

2 May 1984.

Dear Sir,

The Secretary of State has asked me to thank you for your letter of 12 April. As you say, there has already been some preliminary discussion of whether a meeting could be held.

Now that the Secretary of State has had the opportunity to consider your Council's request, he does not see a case for a meeting. In the first place, capital allocations are issued on a single block basis with the choice of individual projects across a wide range of services being left to the local authority. Against this background, therefore, it would be for the Council to plan whatever capital projects it may have in mind for the 1986 Commonwealth Games within its existing block allocation figures, as enhanced by any capital receipts.

Secondly, the Secretary of State has asked me to remind the Council of the basis on which in 1979 he originally supported the City's bid to host the 1986 Games. One of the Council's strongest cards at that time was that it already had the facilities available as a result of the 1970 Games and that all that was required was that they be upgraded for 1986. This upgrading was to be carried out within the Council's normal capital allocations and it was on this understanding that the Secretary of State gave his support to the siting of the 1986 Games in Edinburgh. The responsibility therefore now rests with the Council to accommodate the necessary work within its existing capital consent figures.

In these circumstances, the Secretary of State does not see a need for the meeting you suggest and he advises the Council to finalise its capital projects for the Commonwealth Games within the allocation figures which he has already issued.

Yours sincerely,

Thank you for your letter of 2 August to the Secretary of State in which you seek a meeting to discuss the financing of the 1986 Commonwealth Games and in which you refer particularly to the guarantee which the Government gave for the 1970 Games. Thank you for sending Peter Rees a copy of your letter of 24 October to Hector Monro about the bid by the Commonwealth Games Council for Scotland to bring the 1986 Commonwealth Games to Edinburgh.

I am glad to note that the facilities which were used when Edinburgh staged the Games in 1970 will still be available in 1986 and that neither Government grants, nor guarantee, nor extra resources will be sought for the staging of the Games this time. I therefore see no objection to your writing to the Commonwealth Games Federation in the terms that you propose.

COMMONWEALTH GAMES 1986

The Commonwealth Games Council for Scotland (CGCS) are seeking Government backing for their bid to bring the 1986 Commonwealth Games to Edinburgh.

As you know, in accordance with the agreed procedures governing the Commonwealth Games, each bid to the Commonwealth Games Federation to hold the Games has to be accompanied by "the written approval and support of the Government". I have seen your letter dated 19 September to the Chairman of the Milton Keynes Development Corporation in which you turn down their request for Government support for their bid and also express doubts about support for any Birmingham bid.

Edinburgh staged the Games in 1970 and as the facilities used then will still be available in 1986, the CGCS have said that Government financial assistance is not being sought for Edinburgh to stage the Games again in 1986. Any remedial work or upgrading of existing facilities that may be necessary will be covered by Edinburgh District Council's normal allocation for capital expenditure on recreation facilities. Nor would the operating costs score in PES, since they would be incurred in the private sector: if the Games were to return to Edinburgh they would again be managed by a private company, established for the purpose and registered under the Companies Act. In 1970 both the Government and the then Edinburgh Corporation gave the operating company a guarantee against loss, but this guarantee was not called on, and the CGCS are confident that the 1986 Games could also be held without financial loss. Edinburgh District Council have agreed in principle to provide a guarantee for the 1986 Games, but the extent of the guarantee has yet to be decided.

It has been made clear by my Department to the CGCS, Edinburgh District Council and to the Scottish Sports Council that there can be no question of Government grants or guarantee, or of extra resources being made available for the staging of the Games.

Unless you and the colleagues to whom I am copying this letter see any reason for not doing so, I shall write to the CGCS on the lines of the attached draft.

I understand that the Commonwealth Games Federation will decide on the venue for the 1986 Games at the Moscow Olympics next July, and that within the next month the CGCS would like to know whether they are to have our support.

I am copying this letter and enclosures to Peter Rees at the Treasury and Richard Luce at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

A FLETCHER

NOTE OF MEETING HELD ON WEDNESDAY 4 OCTOBER 1979 AT 113 ROSE STREET TO DISCUSS A BID TO HOLD THE 1986 COMMONWEALTH GAMES IN EDINBURGH

PRESENT:

Mr D Connolly	SED
Mr P Heatly	Chairman, Scottish Sports Council
Mr J K Hutchison	Chief Executive, Scottish Sports Council
Mr W Bell	Director of Recreation, Edinburgh District Council
Mr G Hunter	Hon Secretary, Commonwealth Games Council for Scotland
Mr J P Wallace	SED
Mr S C Brown	SED

1. Mr Hunter explained that as far as he knew, Edinburgh was now the only city in the Commonwealth seriously seeking to hold the 1986 Games. Trinidad and Tobago and Belfast were now out of the running and it did not seem that there would be any serious English bids.

2. Mr Connolly explained that he wished to make it clear that any Government support for the Edinburgh bid would be on the strict understanding that there could be no grants from Government to provide facilities for the Games. This did not mean that if they so wished, the SSC could not make some contribution from their normal grant-in-aid. Mr Bell said that the facilities required for the Games (with the exception of a suitable shooting range) already existed and would be upgraded as necessary within the District Council's normal allocation for expenditure on recreational facilities. The District Council have also included the Leith Sports Complex (estimated to cost £7m at current prices) in their capital programme although the holding of the Games would not be affected if the Leith Centre were not to be completed in time. In noting that the existing facilities would be upgraded, Mr Connolly said he must also stress that there could be no Government commitment to enhance the general services block capital expenditure allocation to take account of work on facilities needed to stage the Games in Edinburgh.

3. In reply to a question, Mr Hunter said it was envisaged that the Games would be managed on the pattern adopted in 1970 ie they would be staged by a private company established for the purpose. In 1970, the then Edinburgh Corporation jointly with the Government, provided a guarantee against loss but the company had no need to call on it. Edinburgh DC have already agreed in principle to provide a similar guarantee for the 1986 Games but the size of the sum required had not yet been decided. It was expected that costs would be covered by gate receipts, a national appeal, TV fees and sales. Mr Connolly said that the Government could not at this stage give any commitment on guarantee.

4. With regard to timing, Messrs Bell and Hunter explained that the availability of accommodation for competitors and officials was a major consideration and said that the administrators of the Pollock Halls of Residence (which would become the "Games Village") had already indicated that September would suit them best.

5. Mr Connolly undertook to approach Ministers on the basis that support should be given to the Edinburgh bid subject to the financial conditions which he had already described and he would try to ensure that a reply would be with the Games Council by November so that they could meet their deadline for printing and issuing a 'bid' brochure.

Dear Mrs. Thatcher,

XIII COMMONWEALTH GAMES EDINBURGH - 1986

I am prompted to write to you as a result of the publicity in the Scotsman today and in particular, the editorial, a copy of which is enclosed for your information.

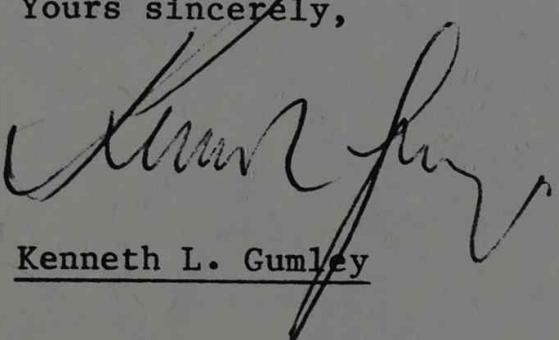

As one of the many creditors who are still awaiting payment for the services which my Company gave during the Games, I find it difficult to understand why the Government cannot support the deficit which has been incurred, particularly as much of this was incurred through the boycott of the Games by various Nations whose actions were prompted by your Government's attitude to sanctions.

As a firm, we not only carried out work for the Commonwealth Games Organisation but in fact contributed to the funds quite substantially, in good faith and in support of the Games. I find it very hard therefore, to understand why the Government is taking such an entrenched attitude in this matter.

Whilst we are one of the small creditors by comparison to some of the other larger companies, it worries me that as a result of this deficit many of these companies will be unable to sustain the loss and could in fact be put out of business as a result of the present situation.

I wholeheartedly agree with the Scotsman's view in this matter and hope that the Government will now see its way to assisting and relieving the serious stress that has been put on some of these companies.

Yours sincerely,

Nothing but the truth

As the sorry saga of the Edinburgh Commonwealth Games finances limps towards what will almost certainly be a humiliating final curtain, the vital arithmetic seems as confused as ever. It may be that the truth will only be revealed in full to a receiver should Mr Robert Maxwell make good his oft repeated threat to liquidate the Games Company. What does seem to be the case is that the shortfall of some £3.5 millions is a sum not dissimilar to the predicted loss at the time he arrived as the "saviour" of the event. Clearly it would be iniquitous to lay the blame for this financial shambles wholly at Mr Maxwell's door. Before his involvement, the team of consultants he hired to examine the Games organisation had already identified what they termed "chronic mismanagement" and "commercial naivety." By then the seeds of disaster had been sown by the Games organisers.

Arguably they could not have predicted the inflated numbers of athletes who indicated their intention to attend; nor could they have foreseen that political circumstances would lead to such a wide-scale boycott which hardly improved the sponsorship climate. But they stand accused nevertheless of getting their sums badly and consistently wrong and of failing to admit that this was the case until forced to do so under threat of total collapse. Even the manoeuvre which brought Mr Maxwell into the picture typified the lack of cohesion which characterised the management operation. For whilst the consortium had agreed on a personal approach to certain targeted industrialists, Mr Borthwick and his colleagues were sending round circulars duplicating the desperate appeal. In the event, the only prompt response came from Maxwell, a man whose reputation in the field of personal publicity seeking might be expected to frighten off many more sources of help than it could possibly attract. This reverse magnetism was something the Games directors never managed to grasp.

Throughout this debacle the Government, principally in the shape of the Scottish Office, has re-iterated its view that these Games were mounted as a commercial exercise, and that no funds could be forthcoming from the public purse. At times it seemed that the door had not in fact been firmly shut on a political rescue, merely that the Scottish Secretary required to satisfy himself that every other avenue had been extensively explored. In making his approach and his latest appeal to Downing Street — and getting a very dusty answer from the Prime Minister — it may be that the chance of Scottish Office support has been inadvertently squandered by Mr Maxwell. Yet the Scottish Office is now the only source of funding which could prevent the quite unfair creation of Games victims. Where it has been possible to discern a firm financial commitment from Mr Maxwell, it appears that he is now willing to give £700,000 from one of his subsidiary companies and arrange for £1.3 million from the Japanese philanthropist Ryoichi Sasakawa provided this funding is matched by £1 million from the Government. For the sake of blameless creditors and to save a further savaging of both civic and national reputations it's a sum the Government must seriously consider providing.

On the way up,

 1 Gordon Street,

October 10, 1986

Sir, — I was saddened, if not unduly surprised, at the reaction (October 9) of Jim Wilson and Elizabeth McKibben to Dr Stockhausen's letter.

Dr Stockhausen put forward the honest view of a sympathetic and friendly-disposed foreigner and did us a service by pointing out what many Scots (especially those of us who have recently travelled in Continental Europe) know, that measured against European standards British standards in almost everything from railway travel to everyday dress are deplorable.

The laziness of mind, which failure to dress properly for the theatre indicates, is the same as that of a BR employee who, when approached about the lateness of a train, shrugged and told me "What does it matter?" What indeed? What does it matter if we go to the opera as if dressed for coal-heaving, or wade through ankle-deep litter to get there, visit public toilets that lack hot water, towels and are generally filthy, eat in restaurants where the service is slovenly, meanwhile being subjected to a barrage of unwanted Muzak.

I could go on but won't;

most of your readers will be well able to add to the list for themselves.

I do not claim that such things do not exist in Europe — they do but they are not accepted as the normal state of affairs, as they are here, and there is a will to improve matters, which is missing here.

The difference in attitude between the letter of Dr Stockhausen and those of Mr Wilson and Ms McKibben probably explains why Germany is a vibrant forward-looking country on the way up, and Britain is a backward-looking country on the way down. The exchange rate of the pound to the Deutschmark over the last 20 years says it all.

Nor was there any notice or leaflet to be found in the Edinburgh University Staff Club, although these could have been placed there free of charge, and although the university sports a Department of Celtic Studies and a School of Scottish Studies.

I telephoned the Inverness HQ of An Comunn Gaidhealach some days before the Mod was due to begin in Edinburgh — but there was no answer. I telephoned the Mount Royal Hotel which was to be base for the Mod, according to The Scotsman — but could obtain no specific information. A personal visit to the hotel later produced no better result.

Jenners was to have some source of programme information, however, again according to The Scotsman; and, after drawing a blank from the staff in several departments, I found the Mod information desk one afternoon at 3:45 pm — but the Mod representatives had left for the day. The notice on the counter was partly obscured to conceal the opening hours, "... to 4:00 pm."

Sir, — Now that the party political conferences are over, it is possible to identify certain weaknesses which, in what is a purely personal opinion, merit examination.

The SDP Conference gave the impression of being dominated to an unhealthy extent by Dr Owen, who had already vitiated relations with the Liberals by his ill-timed and intemperate reaction to the recommendations on defence by the joint SDP-Liberal Policy Commission.

I suggest that the most effective way of allaying Liberal suspicions of him would be for Dr Owen to waive any claim to the leadership of the Alliance in favour of David Steel, who gave the most courageous speech of any of the conferences. Such an action by Dr Owen would clear the air in planning a joint manifesto.

The Liberal Conference pointed the immaturity and irresponsibility of the Young Liberals, who have this in common with Labour's Militant that, if they are not held in check, they could well wreck Alliance hopes. Yet it must be said that the debate on defence at the Liberal Assembly was the most honest of all four debates, as it reflected the division of opinion to be found in the country as a whole and in all parties.

Dear Sir James,

Commonwealth Games Edinburgh 1986

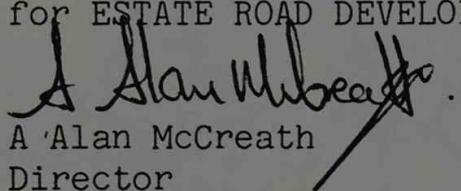

We find it necessary to write to you to express our concern about the funding of the Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh and how their current financial position is adversely affecting our Company.

Prior to the games this year our Company carried out a significant amount of work at Meadowbank under the direction of Edinburgh District Council which has been paid for in the normal way. However, we received a last minute appeal in July 1986 to construct a 60 metres sprint running track and to have this completed prior to the start of the Games. By utilising all the resources at our disposal and working extensive hours, we achieved the construction of this track within the prescribed time limit. Midway through its construction we were informed that the funding for this part of our operation was to be directly from the Commonwealth Games Committee and the consequence of this is that we have a current shortfall of £19,067 which is owed to us by the Games Committee.

We are very concerned that because of the current financial predicament of the Commonwealth Games Committee we may not be paid this outstanding amount. For a medium sized local Company like ourselves the non-payment of this account must have serious ramifications. We are a significant employer of local Edinburgh labour and the financial margins in which we operate are so confined that we simply cannot sustain such a loss in revenue without there being a knock on effect to our Company and its employees.

We would appeal to you to give consideration to alleviate the financial distress that the Commonwealth Games Committee has found itself in, if possible, with some form of assurance that small local companies like ourselves will be properly reimbursed for the work we have carried out. Any influence which you can bring to bear to assist a proper resolution on this problem would be very much appreciated.

The Games have proved to be a potential "shot putt" round the neck of this company.

Mr. Rifkind spoke to Robert Maxwell last night and told him that no taxpayers' money would be forthcoming. (The annual budget of the Scottish Sports Council is about £4¹/₂ m. and it is fully committed for this year.)

The Commonwealth Games Committee met this morning and decided to postpone for a fortnight a decision on putting the company into liquidation. It is pretty clear that they recognise that Birmingham's bid for the 1992 Olympics is one of the main reasons why the Government is sticking so firmly to its line. A decision on the site for the 1992 Olympics is likely to be announced this week, possibly on Friday. No doubt the Edinburgh Committee hope that if Birmingham does not get the Olympics the Government will change its position.

Mr. Maxwell has written a further letter to you (which Mr. Rifkind has also seen). This adds a little more information. The deficit is now put at £3 million, of which £1.3 million would come from Mr. Sasakawa and £700,000 from Mr. Maxwell, leaving £1 million to be found by the Government.

Mr. Maxwell asks for an immediate reply by telephone. His letter was, however, written before this morning's meeting of the Committee so presumably the reply could wait. Indeed, Mr. Rifkind has advised that you should delay your reply until after a decision is announced about the 1992 Olympics.

Mr. Rifkind's motives are as transparent as those of the Edinburgh Committee. If you do delay there is some risk of raising expectations that a decision against Birmingham will indeed cause the Government to change its position.

From the Private Secretary

13 October 1986

Dear Robert,

COMMONWEALTH GAMES

The Prime Minister has seen your Secretary of State's minute of 10 October about the future of the Commonwealth Games Company.

The Prime Minister considered very carefully your Secretary of State's suggestion that he would be prepared to find a million pounds from within his existing resources to make a contribution towards settling the outstanding debts of the company. She has, however, decided, as your Secretary of State knows, that this would not be right. The arguments on this have been set out in earlier correspondence. But the main reason is the belief that it would be wrong for the Government to go back on its clearly expressed declarations that no taxpayers' money would be found for the Games. To go back on this now would set a bad precedent, particularly in view of Birmingham's bid for the Olympics.

I am copying this letter to Jill Rutter (Chief Secretary's Office).

The Rt Hon Margaret Thatcher MP
PRIME MINISTER

Dear Prime Minister,

COMMONWEALTH GAMES

When I wrote to you on 11th September, I left on one side the "question of any possible contribution by HMG to the cost of the Games". I must now regretfully return to that vexed topic.

The deficit on the Games has now been reduced to £3.5m by eliminating certain inflated and unmerited items (e.g claims by Edinburgh District Council) that had to be included in Coopers & Lybrand's £4.3m estimate given until now. In order to give you certainty about this statement, I undertake to you, on behalf of Pergamon Holdings Ltd of which I am Chairman and Chief Executive, to underwrite the paying of the creditors. In other words, if any of the claimants successfully resist these reductions in their claim, I will make up the difference from Pergamon's own resources. Beyond that, I expect to be able to negotiate an agreement with the six biggest business creditors whereby they agree to forego £0.5m of their £1.5m claims, on pain of getting little or nothing if they press their claim. The remaining deficit is, therefore, £3m.

In your very gracious reply of 15th September to my letter of 11th September you added a manuscript note, saying that you saw that I would be meeting Mr Sasakawa shortly and asking me to give him your regards and to recall your meetings with him at Number 10 and in Edinburgh. I did so; and this has now borne some fruit. Subject to my being able to find the balance, he has promised to contribute 300 million yen, being approximately £1.3 million, which, with governmental formalities required to be gone through, would take to the end of the year.

I am prepared, subject to the Government contributing £1 million, to contribute a further £700,000 from Pergamon, to make the whole of the £2 million available immediately to pay the creditors and to take the risk that the Japanese government could delay the authorisation of the remittance of the 300 million yen or even refuse it.

Accordingly, I can and do now guarantee that a sum of £2 million will be forthcoming from Mr Sasakawa and myself, provided only that the Government contribute £1 million. If you say "Yes", I will immediately arrange to meet the "big six" business creditors asking them to contribute £0.5 million of their claims. I will then write to the remaining creditors promising them that they will be paid 100p in the £ (as in Version A attached of the draft letter to creditors).

In this way, the Company's affairs can be finalised decently, given the £2 million from Mr Sasakawa and myself, £1 million from HMG and £0.5 million from the major creditors. I hope that you will agree with me that this is now the only way of concluding the 1986 Commonwealth Games with decorum and equity.

If HMG says "No", Mr Sasakawa and I will also not contribute; and the Board will then be obliged to put the Company into immediate liquidation, in which case the creditors will get little or nothing (as in Version B attached of the draft letter to creditors).

I know that I need not emphasize the urgency. We have barely a week now before the pressures on creditors themselves will drive at least one of them to proceed formally against the company, leading to its immediate liquidation and the forfeiture at least of the £2 million offered by Mr Sasakawa and myself. The consequences for legitimate businesses, many of them quite small, and for jobs in Scotland would be woeful, as would be the impact on our country's reputation.

Yours sincerely

ROBERT MAXWELL

VERSION A

14th October 1986

Dear Creditor

I am pleased to be able now to tell you that our fund-raising efforts, about which I wrote to you on 7th August, have been successful. I am grateful to you for your patience meanwhile.

Mr Ryoichi Sasakawa and Pergamon Holdings Ltd, of which I am Chairman and Chief Executive, have together pledged a contribution of £2m. Her Majesty's Government will be contributing £1m. Subject only to the agreement, which I expect to obtain soon, of certain major creditors to forgo £500,000 of their claims, you will be paid 100p in the £.

It will take four weeks to complete the mechanics of this arrangement. If any creditor presses the Company for settlement before then, it will have to go into immediate liquidation; and you will receive little or nothing.

Yours sincerely

This afternoon Robert Maxwell rang Jeffrey Archer about the future of the Commonwealth Games company. He indicated that if the Government would provide £1 million towards the outstanding debt (of £4 million) he could guarantee that the remainder would be found. If the Government declined to contribute it would be his intention to announce the liquidation of the company on Monday morning.

I share colleagues' reluctance to provide any financial contribution towards the cost of the Commonwealth Games for all the reasons with which you are familiar. However the proposition which Mr Maxwell has now put to us differs from the one we considered earlier: in return for a contribution we can be assured that the books will be balanced and the company will not go into liquidation.

The total cost of the Games has been approximately £16 million and taking into account Mr Maxwell's latest offer private funding to the extent of £15 million would have been provided. If the company is put into liquidation because of the Government's refusal to find a small residual contribution we shall be put in a very difficult position. As you know the Commonwealth Games is a high profile issue in Scotland and I sense that there will be a considerable feeling of embarrassment and resentment here if the company ultimately finds itself in liquidation. Such an outcome would be reported widely overseas and would be seen as a humiliation for Scotland and the UK as a whole.

In these circumstances (and only on the clear understanding that the remainder of the funds required are being found by Mr Maxwell) I would be prepared to find £1 million from within my existing resources to make a contribution.

I have had a brief discussion with John MacGregor who will consider the matter further and let me know his view on Sunday. I feel it is important to put you in the picture now because if we are to take an initiative we will need to be ready to state our position before the Games Committee meets at 9.00 am on Monday.

You wrote to me on 31 July seeking help with the residual deficit that you expect Commonwealth Games (Scotland 1986) Limited to have to meet after the outcome of the various initiatives described in your letter was known.

I am writing to let you know that after the most careful consideration of your proposals I have concluded that government assistance cannot be justified. As your letter acknowledges, the government has made it clear on numerous occasions that no central government funds would be available for the Games. There has never been any uncertainty as to government policy and nothing in your letter persuades me that it would be right to depart from it.

at-trap

Thank you for your letter of 23 September.

I have given further thought to the matter in the light of our discussion yesterday, but I am afraid that I do not see how your letter provides any new arguments in support of a change of view from the one I have previously given.

To repeat, the fundamental difficulties I have with your proposal are: first, that it would seriously damage the Government's credibility in insisting on private financing in both this and other cases (not only Birmingham); and second, that once we had conceded the principle in this case, it would make it harder to resist pressures for increased funding from Mr Maxwell, whatever conditions we attempted to put on our agreement. Nicholas Ridley's letter to me of 24 September, which I showed you, reinforces these arguments.

Your offer - for which I am grateful - to see if you can fund this out of your own votes - does not help us on these fundamental points. I am afraid therefore that I still cannot agree to your proposal.

I am copying this letter to the Prime Minister, Geoffrey Howe, Nicholas Ridley and Sir Robert Armstrong.

Dear John

COMMONWEALTH GAMES: FINANCES

I have seen the correspondence on the above and in particular Malcolm Rifkind's letter to you of 12 September.

As I understand it, we always made plain to Edinburgh that the recent Commonwealth Games had to be privately financed. We made no bones about our lack of commitment, in particular to financial support. To go back on that now would seem to me to give the wrong messages to Birmingham for their Olympic proposal. Birmingham and other interests will be looking carefully at our decision on Edinburgh, to see if there might be a safety net after all. I recognise that in denying that, and in denying support to Edinburgh, we may harm Birmingham's prospects further of gaining the nomination of the International Olympic Committee - and that they could therefore seek to blame us if and when they fail. But I think we should be true to our previous statements and our policy. Perhaps to save any apparent disadvantage to the Birmingham bid, a decision one way or the other could await the IOC decision on that bid on 17 October?

COMMONWEALTH GAMES: FINANCES

Thank you for your letter of 19 September about the possibility of making a financial contribution to the Edinburgh Games.

I accept the force of the arguments which you and Peter Brooke have put. But I do not think our concern about Birmingham should over-ride the merits of my proposal about Edinburgh. The circumstances are quite different and our proposal is a very tough one. It should be possible to use a tough deal with Edinburgh now to reinforce our tough line over Birmingham. Even if the Olympics actually take place in Birmingham as early as 1992, the Edinburgh precedent by then will be a minor consideration. Moreover there must be a danger that if we do not help Edinburgh we will be thought by the international sporting community to lack commitment. This could surely prejudice Birmingham's prospects of getting the Olympics at all.

No move ↙
I do not accept that making an offer of the kind I have in mind would open us up to pressure for further concessions. The conditional offer which I have suggested would put the pressure on the organisers, and Robert Maxwell in particular, to clinch their fund-raising proposals and obtain agreement with creditors. The latter can be expected to co-operate, because if they do not their prospects of being paid will be prejudiced. I would undertake not to entertain any bargaining whatsoever with Mr Maxwell over the amount of the Government contribution or the conditions attached to it.

On the other hand if we do not make a genuine and realistic offer to contribute we run the risk of doing immeasurable damage to the reputation of Scotland - and indeed the United Kingdom - in the sporting and international communities. My proposal is a small price to pay to demonstrate the Government's commitment to the Commonwealth, to sport and to Scotland.

For the reasons given in my letter of 15 August I believe any Government contribution should be a charge on the Reserve. I attach such importance to this matter however that in order to reach agreement I will be prepared, without commitment at this stage, to try and find the £1.5 million up to which I propose to contribute by means of savings from amongst my votes.

If the Commonwealth Games company is put into liquidation there will be a feeling of humiliation and embarrassment throughout Scotland. As their ability to raise funds was undoubtedly harmed by the massive boycott of the Games, I hope you will agree that the modest, conditional, payment I am suggesting is a reasonable contribution towards resolving a very serious situation.

I am sending copies of this letter to the Prime Minister, Geoffrey Howe, Nicholas Ridley and to Sir Robert Armstrong.

De Malcolm,

COMMONWEALTH GAMES: FINANCES

Thank you for your further letter of 12 September.

I strongly support the line taken by Peter Brooke in his letter to you of 27 August, and do not think your letter changes the basic arguments. All along the Scottish Office have made it clear to the organisers that there would be no Government support. The organisers were not obliged to host the Games and should have been mindful of the risk of some sort of boycott.

I see no reason why a Government contribution should help to encourage private sector contributions.

Any concession to the organisers of the Edinburgh Games would put us on the slippery slope; and in my view once an offer had been made it would be very difficult for the Government to avoid paying even if the conditions were not met.

I note what you say about "Doomsday" having arrived for Edinburgh, but it should not be difficult to deal with any misguided suggestions that Edinburgh is being less favourably treated than Birmingham. As you know, the proposed indemnity for Birmingham will only apply if the Games are cancelled and, in such an event if net losses are in excess of £100 million. Birmingham would get no help with an operating deficit if the Games were held, even if it was in excess of £100 million. Edinburgh would have no claim had they obtained an indemnity along the lines proposed for Birmingham. Colleagues agreed a tough policy on Birmingham's Olympic bid and I see no reason to soften our approach in relation to Edinburgh. Above all, to do so would seriously weaken our policy on Birmingham's bid and be repercussive in other areas.

I am copying this letter to the Prime Minister, Geoffrey Howe, Nicholas Ridley and to Sir Robert Armstrong.

Most grateful if you would glance at this. You should see papers from flap in file.

My main reason is that if the Prime Minister says nothing about the question of HMG support Maxwell may read this as further encouragement. But the only thing she really could say which wouldn't sound encouraging to him is a definite no which may cause problems given that we can't clear the reply with the Scottish Office, and Maxwell may (will) take offence since he has said the letter is not about the possible contribution.

Dear Chief Secretary,

I wrote to you about this matter on 15 August. In your absence, Peter Brooke replied on 27 August and the Prime Minister's views were conveyed in her Private Secretary's letter of 19 August.

The Prime Minister is entirely justified in being puzzled by the apparent contradiction between Mr Maxwell's optimistic public statements and the financial reality. The hard fact of the matter is that there is an expected deficit of some £4m after paying in full those creditors owed up to £5,000 and 35% of the amounts owed to other creditors. The Board of Directors decided at its meeting on 8 September to continue its fund raising efforts to the end of the month. Despite the optimistic noises made from time to time neither Mr Maxwell nor Mr Sasakawa has to my knowledge made any commitment and the boycotting nations have not replied to (or have rejected) the bills totalling some £2.5m sent to them by Mr Maxwell. There has been a small but welcome additional income from creditor donations; it has however been more than offset by additional expenditure items coming to light and reductions in future income expectations from such things as book sales and licences which were hit by the boycott. It is to my mind unrealistic to expect that Mr Maxwell and Mr Sasakawa will on their own put up enough money to meet the amount outstanding of £4m; they and any other benefactors will require to be encouraged and such encouragement can now be provided only by a Government contribution.

I willingly concede Peter's point that any Government concession should not put us on a slippery slope producing further concessions. We ensure this by making our offer on the conditions set out in my letter of 15 August ie the commitment is withdrawn if by a date chosen by us the Company has not received firm commitments from other donors which when taken with our contribution will satisfy the creditors. I much prefer this to a commitment on say some £ for £ basis up to a maximum contribution which could mean a substantial contribution from us while still leaving the Company in deficit.

The Prime Minister and Peter have both mentioned the significance for the organisers of the Birmingham Olympics of a contribution to the Games' deficit. The relevance of Birmingham in the present context lies in the public perception of the Government's attitude; the fact that the proposed Birmingham guarantee is confined to a "Doomsday" situation is not widely understood by the general public. As they see it, "Doomsday" has already arrived for Edinburgh, with the sure prospect of discredit to the host nation, damage to the concept of the Games as an expression of the Commonwealth ideal and distress for the creditors unless the Government makes a positive move. Without it, we give the impression of being indifferent to such consequences. It is in any event, the financial outcome of the Edinburgh Games which will convey the appropriate message to the Birmingham organisers.

I must therefore ask you to reconsider your position and repeat my request for your agreement in principle, and that of colleagues to my proposal to offer the Company a contribution of £1.5m provided the Company raises sufficient money which, when taken along with our contribution, would enable the Company to satisfy all its creditors; the offer to be null and void if that provision is not fulfilled by a date to be specified.

The Prime Minister indicated that she would need to be convinced that there was no alternative before agreeing to a Government payment. I have no doubt that there is no alternative if the Government wishes to avoid damage to Scotland's reputation abroad, and severe criticism of the Government, itself, for insensitivity and unfairness.

I am copying this letter to the Prime Minister, Geoffrey Howe and Nicholas Ridley.

11th September, 1986,

Strictly Personal and Private

Dear Prime Minister,

COMMONWEALTH GAMES

I write to you privately in genuine and total mystification about the sudden campaign of sabotage which someone in Government appears to be conducting against my efforts to bring the Commonwealth Games Company safely into harbour financially, as we brought it safely into harbour operationally back in July.

I am not here addressing the question of any possible contribution by HMG to the cost of the Games. That can be pursued for the moment through other channels. What has astonished and baffled me this week is the sequence of semi-unattributable briefings which appear to have been given by the Scottish Office and by "a Cabinet source" grossly misrepresenting the past and present facts of the Games Company's position and putting in acute jeopardy the efforts we are still making to raise the funds needed to meet the claims of all creditors.

The attached note details the errors and misrepresentations. The effect of them is, of course, more or less to incite creditors - who until now have been content to give the time needed to raise the balance of the funds - to put the Company into liquidation with resulting serious losses for creditors. Surely, HMG does not want this, whatever its own willingness to contribute may be.

What is more, if HMG were to make up the deficit after a liquidation the bill would be many times greater than it would be now, simply because the other fund-raising would terminate with a liquidation. I am in fact quite hopeful of raising all or most of what is needed by the end of this month or soon after, although the budget for that certainly includes my hopes for some Government contribution.

In particular, I have now presented personally to Mr Ryoichi Sasakawa the application for help which he said at the Games, as you will recall, that he would be ready to receive when precise figures were available. I was encouraged by his reception of my presentation in New York earlier this week. If he reads The Times and the Glasgow Herald, which I pray he does not, the damage will, I am afraid, be grave and all my efforts on this front undermined. Why should he help, if he reads that the Government itself is hostile to our efforts and does not believe there is a real problem, anyway ?

Why would the "Cabinet source" want to wreck these chances ? Surely, the more we can raise to meet the deficit, the better it must be from HMG's point of view as well as from that of the creditors. I have always believed that I had the moral backing of Malcolm Rifkind and yourself in my efforts to see that the Games went ahead and that the Company paid its bills, whether or not HMG would help financially. Have I been wrong in this ? Is there some personal animosity ? We disagree, of course, politically; but surely that need not interfere with a practical operation in the public interest, such as the Games, which is far removed from politics and even further from party politics.

When you attended the Games you were good enough to indicate your understanding of the difficulties, especially the effects of the lamentable boycott and the very high costs of security, and your appreciation of the efforts that had been made to see that the Games were staged efficiently and happily and to raise the needed revenue by appeals and by exploitation of the commercial opportunities. I had no sense then of the note of extraordinary antagonism that is struck in this week's "briefings" in the Glasgow Herald and The Times (copies enclosed).

I am by now fairly broad-shouldered and thick-skinned about what is said in the press. But I would like to have your assurance that HMG wants us to succeed in our fund-raising efforts, whatever may be HMG's final decision on a contribution of its own. If that is so, I think that it is fair for me to ask that your office should ensure that the unattributable sources understand the damaging consequences for the creditors of the kind of stories that have appeared.

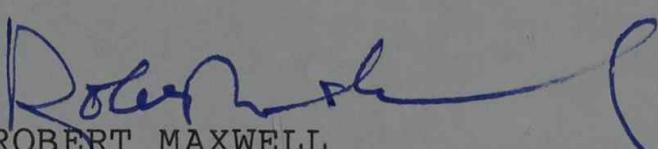

To force the company into liquidation and to frighten off those like Mr Sasakawa who really can help, when another three weeks or so stand a good chance of substantially enhancing the funds available to meet our bills, seems quite silly and unfair to the creditors. They - the "sources" - should also try to understand accurately the basic financial arithmetic of the Company's position, as explained in the course of the attached note.

I am sorry to trouble you personally with this. But, when it appears that senior Government officers are acting unilaterally and outside the framework of Government policy, it is only to the Prime Minister that one can appeal. I hope that you can help to abate this sterile hail of brickbats so that we can get on with our proper task of raising the remaining money. We may still be asking HMG to help; but that is a separate matter.

with best personal wishes,

yours sincerely

Whitehall Briefings 9th and 10th September, 1986

A. Glasgow Herald, 9th September:

"Scottish Office sources have indicated to the Glasgow Herald that the Government's position on bailing out the Games has not softened in the weeks since the event ended. Privately, they say that Mr Robert Maxwell was widely perceived as having gone into the exercise in order to save the Games and the current deficit did not seem much different to [sic] what it was when he became involved. One Scottish Office insider said: 'He appears to have had a huge amount of publicity out of the Games and one wonders when a contribution is going to be forthcoming from Mr Maxwell before he starts approaching anybody else"

Comment:

1. I did go into the Games to help save them, as asked and welcomed by the Company's Board and as encouraged by Malcolm Rifkind. The Games were saved from cancellation which was imminent. There are still fair prospects of saving them financially within the next few weeks.
2. The deficit faced by the Games on 19th June, when I agreed to help, was later increased by over £4m by the effects of the boycott - as to £2.7m. by lost revenue and the rest in extra costs. Coopers and Lybrand have independently confirmed these figures. If the deficit now, before our final fund-raising efforts have borne fruit, is much the same as in June, then the position has already been improved by more than £4m., which is what the boycott cost us.
3. More publicity I hardly need ! Still less have I needed the massive diversion of my time and efforts from our own businesses, which have been seriously neglected. For that, perhaps, the Chancellor might justly reprove me.
4. The inquiry as to when a contribution from me is going to be forthcoming is quite extraordinary and - in the strict sense of the word - impertinent. Our Group of companies has put in more than £2m. in resources and cash. If you want details, I shall be happy to supply them with confirmation from Coopers and Lybrand. Had Malcolm Rifkind been able to see me on August 15th before his holiday, I would in addition have been able, as was hinted to his Private Office, to put to him a further offer on my own part, which I believe he would have thought substantial and valuable. If time allows us - before enforced liquidation stops all fund-raising activity - to resume the dialogue which was then suspended, I would still hope to be able to put my proposition.

"A Cabinet source suggested that Mr Maxwell should use his own resources to rescue the creditors. 'If Mr Maxwell really is concerned about his [sic] creditors', the Cabinet source said, 'he and his Mirror group should make good the losses in recognition of the huge publicity he's got. It's a flea-bite to him'.....The Cabinet source maintained that the Government had no moral or political incentive to act: the African [sic] boycott had made little financial difference, contrary to Mr Maxwell's claims....The creditors, he said, should deal with any failure to pay in the normal manner through the law".

Comment:

1. I have already given massively of my time, energy and credit with friends. My Group has already contributed massive resources of over £2 million (see above).
2. The creditors are creditors of the Games Company, liability to whom was incurred almost entirely before I was asked to come in to help to ensure that Games were not cancelled and that the creditors were paid. They are not "my" creditors, but those of the Games Company of which I am Chairman.
3. MGN is a public company and cannot simply give the shareholders' money away without justification. It is also engaged in very keen competition with other newspaper groups, with many jobs depending on its survival. £4 million pounds would be a monster flea with a lethal bite to thousands whose jobs depend upon us.
4. The Games boycott cost the Company over £4 million (see above). Whether or not this creates a moral obligation on HMG to contribute can be discussed separately. But to deny the cost, independently attested by Coopers and Lybrands, is silly, damaging and seemingly malicious.
5. If creditors deal with the matter through the law, as the Edinburgh District Council foolishly sought to do at one point, the Company would simply go into immediate liquidation; and the creditors would lose £4m. or so. If they wait, as they and the Board have all agreed to do, for a few more weeks, they may get some or all of their money. Why should the "Cabinet source" urge upon even one of them a lemming-like course, which can only do them harm and which they and the Board do not judge to be in their best interests ?

Maxwell told he must go it alone

By Paul Martin

Robert Maxwell's demands that the Government help bail out the Commonwealth Games Company which has admitted a £4 million debt, have met with a crushing rebuff.

The Scottish Secretary, Mr Malcolm Rifkind, said yesterday that his position — that the Games must stick to their original promise to be self-financing — had not altered despite the announcement of the deficit and a letter from Mr Maxwell asking for £2.5 million.

Government sources said that Mrs Thatcher, the Prime Minister, who discussed the matter during a visit to Scotland last week, was equally adamant.

A Cabinet source suggested that Mr Maxwell should use his own resources to rescue the creditors. "If Mr Maxwell really is concerned about his creditors," the Cabinet source said, "he and his Mirror Group should make good the losses in recognition of the huge publicity he's got. It's a flea-bite to him."

Games sources disclosed yesterday that the Mirror Group would pay £250,000 for all its trackside advertising, its displays on the main electronic scoreboard and its hospitality suite. "A very good bargain for them," one Games Company director said. "But then at that late stage we were in no position for tough bargaining." Mr Maxwell and the Mirror Group had rejected requests for advertising or sponsorship 15 months beforehand, he noted.

Security bill is over £700,000

Mr Arthur Campbell, a Games Company director and Scottish Commonwealth Games Council chairman, urged the Government at least to pay the security costs, which at over £700,000 had been several times higher than original estimates.

The Cabinet source maintained that the Government had no moral or political incentive to act: the African-led boycott had made little financial difference, contrary to Mr Maxwell's claims. Nor would it lose significant Scottish voting support by not intervening.

The creditors, he said, should deal with any failure to pay in the normal manner available through the law. Edinburgh District Council, which met Mr Maxwell this week, has given him another three weeks to finalize his fund-raising efforts.

Mr Maxwell said last month that if the Scottish Office would not budge "the company will certainly close down and let the Government pick up the pieces". He now maintains that he still has further sources to tap, including the Japanese benefactor, Mr Ryichi Sasakawa.

One director argued yesterday that Mr Maxwell would himself have to bail out the company to avoid possible penalties under the Insolvency Act because he had caused the Games to continue running up debts when many directors had felt legally obliged to liquidate the company. And Mr Maxwell's decision to pay out all creditors owed less than £5,000 in full while paying the rest only one third constituted preferential treatment that contravened proper insolvency practice, he argued.

GLASGOW HERALD - TUESDAY - SEPTEMBER 9, 1986

Rifkind dashes hopes of cash aid for Games

By CHRISTOPHER REEKIE

THE Government appeared to shut the door on hopes of a donation to wipe out the £4m deficit on the Commonwealth Games yesterday.

After an announcement by publisher Mr Robert Maxwell that efforts would be made to clear the deficit by the end of the month, the Secretary of State for Scotland, Mr Malcolm Rifkind, said: "If there has been a new request from Mr Maxwell then the appropriate thing is for me to respond to him and the Games people."

"The Government's position on these Games being self-financing is well known, and I can't say anything much different to what has been said in the past."

Scottish Office sources have indicated to the Glasgow Herald that the Government's position on bailing out the Games has not softened in the weeks since the event ended. Privately, they say that Mr Maxwell was widely perceived as having gone into the exercise in order to save the Games, and the current deficit did not seem much different to what it was when he became involved.

One Scottish Office insider said: "He appears to have had a huge amount of publicity out of the Games and one wonders when a contribution is going to be forthcoming from Mr Maxwell before he starts approaching anybody else."

The board of directors of the Games company met yesterday in Edinburgh to approve the final financial statement. The final accounts showed that the Games had cost more than £17m.

Afterwards Mr Maxwell said: "We are going to raise the deficit. We will do our best to raise it. We have sources in mind. Some are quite well known."

He said he hoped that all the major bills would be paid off by early next month.

If the money was not forthcoming, "it will be up to the creditors. I will convene a meeting and let them decide."

Mr Maxwell said an approach would be made to Mr Ryoichi Sasakawa, the Japanese philanthropist.

Asked about the possibility of a contribution from himself, Mr Maxwell said: "If there is a small shortfall, I may well do so, but if it is large, the answer is no."

The Games directors are to meet to review the situation on October 13.

Mr Maxwell admitted at one stage while answering questions from journalists that he wished he had never become involved in the Games. He said he did not think it would be advantageous to the creditors or to Scotland to put the Games company into liquidation. He added: "I will remain with the Games until the situation is resolved one way or the other."

He was naturally disappointed at the size of the deficit. The boycott of the Games had cost £2.7m and there had been additional costs of about £2m.

The meeting had been "very amicable and satisfactory," and he had resolved his differences with Mr Kenneth Borthwick, chairman of the organising committee. Mr Maxwell accused Mr Borthwick last week of undermining fund-raising efforts by formally thanking some major sponsors. He said that he and Mr Borthwick had agreed to send a letter to the companies involved.

Mr Borthwick said as he left: "It was an excellent meeting and there was complete understanding by all parties." He added that he was not hurt by Mr Maxwell's remarks.

Mr Maxwell later met Edinburgh district councillors. Councillor Mark Lazarowicz, leader of the Labour group, said: "Mr Maxwell gave us an assurance that all the creditors will be met in full, which we welcome on behalf of the ratepayers and, I am sure, of the commercial creditors."

"Mr Maxwell also said that the games organisation had now made arrangements for the reinstatement work at the venues so that they can be brought back into full use. The work should start in a few days."

Robert Maxwell has written you a long rambling letter (Flag A) complaining about press stories which supposedly report briefings given by the Scottish Office and "a Cabinet source" about the financial position of the Games. He seems to have a point, though he exaggerates greatly. I suggest you do not explicitly answer him on this aspect and simply give him an assurance that the Government wants him to succeed in his fund raising. A letter is immediately below for your signature.

Mr. Maxwell says he has now presented to Mr. Sasakawa the application for help that he said at the Games he would be ready to receive. I have not sent Mr. Maxwell's letter to the Scottish Office because he is so insistent about it being personal and private. But this news about Mr. Sasakawa would in any case not deter Mr. Rifkind from continuing to press for a Government contribution. A further letter to the Chief Secretary is at Flag B.

Mr. Rifkind's letter in its final paragraph picks up your view that you would need to be convinced there was no alternative before agreeing to a Government payment. Mr. Rifkind says there is no alternative if the Government wishes to avoid damage to Scotland's reputation abroad and severe criticism of the Government itself for insensitivity and unfairness.

One possibility would be for you to leave the Chief Secretary to see this off. But Mr. Rifkind could well still persist and you may prefer to intervene to say that the Government has made its position absolutely clear throughout, that the organisers and suppliers should and did know that there are risks in mounting any international games and that you see no case for Government support.

You also asked for details of any Government support for the Birmingham Olympics. The position is that Mr. Ridley is hosting a reception on 18 September (which of course you are attending); Embassies and High Commissions have helped deliver Birmingham's bid documentation to IOC members, and "with an eye to the potential benefits of, inter alia, community sport flowing from the bid, the Sports Council has offered Birmingham £250,000 towards its promotional costs; that is a matter for the Council." Dear Malcolm,

COMMONWEALTH GAMES: FINANCES

Thank you for your letter of 15 August to John MacGregor, who is on holiday.

Despite Mr Maxwell's suggestion that there has been uncertainty over the Government's position, it has in fact been entirely clear, as your Private Secretary's letter of 14 August to Mr Peter Jay makes clear. Our consistent position has been that these Games should be financed privately without any central Government contribution.

Mr Maxwell makes it clear that there were serious defects in the organisational arrangements for the Games, which had nothing to do with the Commonwealth boycott. Giving a guarantee as you suggest would seriously jeopardise the incentive on the part of private sector organisers of other projects, particularly the Birmingham Olympics, to organise themselves properly, because they would assume that they would be much more likely to be able to fall back on Government funding. The kind of deficit guarantee Mr Maxwell is seeking is different from the offer we have made in the case of the Birmingham Olympics, which is for a limited guarantee to be applied only if the Games are cancelled at a late stage for reasons entirely beyond the organisers' control. Mr Maxwell must have known of the risks when he decided to take on the chairmanship of CSGL, and the company's creditors invested in the company in the full knowledge of the Government's attitude. It would be wrong to insulate him (and his creditors) from this decision. Once we conceded the principle of a Government contribution, it could be harder to resist further increases if Mr Maxwell claimed they were necessary; so we would be on a very slippery slope.

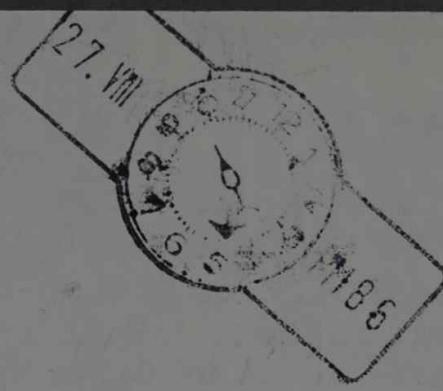

I understand the political considerations that you set out towards the end of your letter. But in my view it would be wrong, for the reasons that I have given, for the Government to offer a guarantee of the kind you propose.

I am copying this letter to the Prime Minister, Geoffrey Howe, Nicholas Ridley and Sir Robert Armstrong.

Dear Tim,

Thank you for copying to me your letter of 19 August in response to the Secretary of State for Scotland's of 15 August to the Chief Secretary to the Treasury.

I confirm that we have consistently stressed to Birmingham that the Olympic Games, should they be awarded them, should be entirely privately financed. As a result of discussions with them, they have adapted their provisional proposals to remove hidden public subsidies. We have, as required by the International Olympic Committee, given Birmingham certain assurances including the offer of an indemnity limited to losses in excess of £100m due to late cancellation of the Games for reasons beyond Birmingham's control.

So far as Birmingham's bid is concerned, there has been no direct Government financial support. As the Prime Minister has noted, my Secretary of State is to host a reception on 18 September to help Birmingham raise private sector funds. Additionally, our Embassies and High Commissions have helped deliver Birmingham's bid documentation to IOC members. With an eye to the potential benefits to, inter alia, community sport flowing from the bid, the Sports Council has offered Birmingham £250,000 towards its promotional costs; that is a matter for the Council. I understand that the Scottish Sports Council has similarly contributed over £350,000 towards the development of facilities which were used during the Commonwealth Games.

The Prime Minister has seen your Secretary of State's letter to the Chief Secretary to the Treasury about the finances of the Commonwealth Games.

The Prime Minister was puzzled by the anticipated deficit to which the letter refers. It was her understanding that Mr. Robert Maxwell had secured outside assistance to meet any deficit of this kind and she is therefore concerned that there should now be a suggestion of Government help.

More generally, she does not accept some of the reasoning in your Secretary of State's letter. Far from a Government donation to the Commonwealth Games being consistent with its approach to Birmingham's Olympic bid, it would in fact undermine it since the Government has made it clear that there will be no financial help forthcoming for Birmingham. Moreover, it was her understanding that the amount of central Government funds being spent on the presentation of Birmingham's bid is minimal and is limited to the cost of a reception at Lancaster House.

I should be grateful if you could look into the present position with regard to the outside help to which Mr. Maxwell has previously attached some importance. In view of the implications of the Government's approach to Birmingham's Olympic bid the Prime Minister would need to be convinced that there was no alternative before agreeing to a Government payment of the kind to which your Secretary of State refers.

I am sending a copy of this letter to Colin Budd (Foreign and Commonwealth Office), Isobel Ogilvie (Department of the Environment) and Paul Pegler (Chief Secretary's Office).

PRIME MINISTER

COMMONWEALTH GAMES

It will come as no surprise that the Scottish Office are now asking the Treasury (letter attached) if we can make a contribution of £1.5m to the Commonwealth Games. In support of this they argue that the Games organisers command widespread sympathy in Scotland; they organised the Games well; they did not criticise the Government for the boycott; and to help the organisers will be consistent with the Government's readiness to support Birmingham's Olympics bid; against this is the powerful argument that it would undermine the Government's attempts to ensure that the Birmingham Olympics bid is self-supporting.

Do you wish to enter the argument at this stage or await the comments of colleagues?

Dear John

COMMONWEALTH GAMES: FINANCES

Our officials noted in July that because of the boycott it seemed likely that the XIII Commonwealth Games might well finish with quite a substantial deficit. This has now transpired and I am writing to propose that - subject to certain strict conditions which I go into below - a Government contribution of £1.5 million to the Games Company should be made.

On 31 July Mr Robert Maxwell sent me the enclosed letter asking for a Government commitment to underwrite any final deficit which the Games company might incur up to a maximum of between £2 million and £2.5 million. Our officials have been in touch about this and eventually an interim reply was sent at Private Secretary level (copy also enclosed) holding the position until next month.

In the first week of August the Games company were taken to the Court of Session by Edinburgh District Council for payment of rent and other contributions which it was claimed were outstanding. This action, if maintained, would have resulted in the company going into liquidation immediately. It was however withdrawn and at a Directors' meeting on 11 August the company decided to continue trading, on the basis of legal advice to the effect that they had a duty to minimise the potential loss to creditors. The next meeting of Directors takes place on 8 September. Robert Maxwell believes that in practice the company may be lucky to have that much breathing space before further legal action from one of its hundred or so creditors materialises.

The enclosed financial report was submitted to the Directors on 11 August: you will see that the forecast deficit is £3,356,000. Although this includes £587,000 for additional items including contingencies it is clear that some of the assumptions may be optimistic. On the other hand some substantial items are left out of the reckoning, including a guarantee of £250,000 from Edinburgh District Council. It is clear that without a financial contribution from HMG the most likely outcome is that the Company will go into insolvent liquidation with outstanding liabilities of about £3.5 million. Although a contribution of £1.5 million would not meet these liabilities in full I believe that it would be sufficient to enable the Company to persuade other potential donors to meet the remaining deficit; and it should be enough to enable the Company to be wound up with all the creditors satisfied. I propose that the Government contribution should be to guarantee payment of up to £1.5 million towards the liabilities of the Company, subject to the condition that the Company raises sufficient money which would, when taken along with the guarantee, enable the Company to satisfy all its creditors. It would be my intention to indicate that unless this condition were fulfilled by 3 October our commitment would be withdrawn as from that date.

M
R I believe there is a substantial Government interest in proceeding in this way. The organisers command widespread sympathy in Scotland for the way they mounted the Games successfully despite the enormous problems caused by the boycott. At no time did they attempt to criticise the Government for the boycott. They willingly arranged for the Prime Minister and other Ministers to visit the Games; and they expressed strong disapproval of Edinburgh District Council's courtesy to the Prime Minister during her visit. A great deal of goodwill and voluntary effort went into this achievement, much of it from a sector from which the Government draws its own most committed support. To help the organisers would be consistent with the Government's readiness to support Birmingham's Olympic bid: the amount involved bears comparison with what is already being spent from central government funds on the presentation of this bid alone. A similar channel (the Scottish Sports Council) could be used to help the Edinburgh Games, using the powers we currently use under the Appropriation Act for related purposes. The Games were very much a British event, followed on the media and particularly on TV. I thus see a general public interest here and for this reason seek agreement that any Government contribution should be a charge on the reserve. I do not presume to comment on the foreign policy implications of what I propose; but I am certain that so far as British public opinion is concerned, a decision not to help the Games would deal a further blow to support for the Commonwealth.

Mr Maxwell has written to creditors implying that there are good hopes of help from HMG (see paragraph 4 of the third enclosure to this letter). Our legal advice is that we must not allow any misleading impression to persist and you will see that the interim reply to Mr Maxwell's letter of 31 July addresses this danger. It remains however highly desirable to send a substantive reply to Mr Maxwell before the next Directors' meeting.

If agreement cannot be reached in correspondence I would hope we might have a meeting as soon as the holiday season allows. I could be available at any time from the first week of September onwards.

I am sending copies of this letter to the Prime Minister, Sir Geoffrey Howe and Nicholas Ridley.

Dear Malcolm,

REPORT TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR SCOTLAND
BY THE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF
COMMONWEALTH GAMES (SCOTLAND 1986) LIMITED
CONCERNING THE COMPANY'S POSITION

Following the meeting of the board of directors on Thursday 24 July 1986, I am writing with the knowledge of my board to advise you of the current position of Commonwealth Games (Scotland 1986) Limited ("CGSL") and to make proposals to obtain certain assurances. If obtained, these will ensure that the company can continue to meet its obligations and, in due course, pay its small and medium sized creditors in full and subsequently the large ones as well subject to the other proposals set out in this paper.

This report is set out under the following principal headings:

1. Background
2. Summary of Problems
3. Current Position
4. Proposal

1. Background:

In 1978 Edinburgh was awarded the position of host to the 1986 Commonwealth Games. In order to prepare for the Games an organising committee was formed under the then Lord Provost, Mr Kenneth Borthwick.

Chairman: Robert Maxwell Executive Deputy Chairman: Bryan Cowgill
Chief Executive: Blair Grossel

All correspondence to Chief Executive.

At the outset, and since, the Government has made it clear on numerous occasions to the Games Organising Committee that no central public funds would be available to stage these Games. All funding was to be raised from local government and a variety of private sources. This had not previously been attempted either in the United Kingdom or elsewhere, apart from the last Olympics at Los Angeles. On 21 December 1982 the Organising Committee formed this company to undertake the contractual obligations necessary to stage the Games.

2. Summary of Problems:

I set out below a brief commentary on each of the main problems which faced the organisers of the Games and which have a bearing on the present situation facing the company.

(a) Organisation -

CGSL established an organisation which reflected the previous experience of those charged with staging the Games. Committees were formed to handle each of the various matters which had to be attended to. A chairman was appointed to each committee. Most of these committees carried out their tasks through an executive officer who was a fulltime employee of CGSL. These executive officers were, in the main, retired or seconded local government officers. Unfortunately, the duties and responsibilities of these executives were mainly determined by their committees, made up of part time and retired private individuals, rather than the necessary central CGSL executive direction.

In the first half of 1984 it was found that this organisation was inappropriate to a commercially funded operation. In August 1984 the board appointed a chief executive, Mr Blair Grosset (a retired former local government financial officer), to take overall responsibility for the management of the company. However very little of the previous established modus operandi changed and no effective central direction was established to plan, coordinate and implement the preparations for the Games in the needed professionally managed manner.

(b) Resource Limitations - the Scottish Dimension -

The 1986 Commonwealth Games were expected to be the biggest yet staged. The extent of the facilities necessary was underestimated and initially it was not appreciated that without central government support the resources available in Edinburgh and in Scotland were inadequate to meet the demands on the organisation. For example, the rules of the Commonwealth Games Federation state that fund raising should be confined to the host country. Astonishingly, it only gradually dawned on the Games Organising Committee that Scotland, on its own, did not have the capacity to fund such a major international event on the stipulated basis.

When this lack of resources was recognised, CGSL belatedly sought assistance from outside Scotland. Initially there was some opposition to this course of action from the English, Welsh and Northern Irish Commonwealth Games Councils which frustrated the company's efforts. These conflicts took time and effort to resolve and thus added further to the burdens facing the organisers. This episode alone underlines the amateurish approach by the Scottish side to this immense problem.

(c) Marketing and Publicity -

There has been a major failure in publicising the 1986 Commonwealth Games in Scotland and throughout the UK. There has been an alarming lack of awareness and apathy about the Games amongst the public and in the business community. This has clearly contributed to the failure by the various fund raising activities to meet their original projected targets.

Despite employing paid professional PR consultants, a major failing has been the lack of a comprehensive public relations and publicity plan from the start. For example, no attempt was made to brief the media in Scotland or London on a regular basis. Industry and commerce have not been effectively harnessed to support the activities of the company. Such publicity as was arranged was often only locally orientated and there was little or no attempt to promote the company or the Games nationally through Fleet Street or internationally.

(d) Fund Raising -

CGSL sub-contracted the main fund raising activity to C G Consortium Limited, a joint venture between Saatchi & Saatchi and Arthur Young ("the Consortium") which was formed for the purpose. Their original target was to raise £15 million from sponsorship and other activities such as the sale of commemorative coins. Twelve months ago, the Consortium advised the company that they expected to generate around £12 million with a minimum projection of £8 million. This minimum figure was raised by the Consortium to £9.5 million in December 1985 and they now admit that this was an error of judgement on their part. Notwithstanding the fact that the Consortium and the Board knew that their income projections were optimistic, CGSL nevertheless continued to plan and incur expenditure in line with the Consortium's optimistic projections.

CGSL, having sub-contracted the commercial exploitation of the Games, failed to monitor and supervise the performance of the Consortium and to amend its expenditure plans to match the falling revenue expectations.

The Consortium now admits that it consistently adopted an over-optimistic view of the prospects which incredibly seems to have been based largely on the experiences of the Los Angeles Olympic Games. On that occasion, a substantial portion of the sponsorship income was raised in the 6 months immediately prior to the event.

However, Los Angeles had covered its basic running costs from ticket money and the sale of broadcasting rights for several hundred million dollars. CGSL sold the broadcasting rights for the 1986 Commonwealth Games to the BBC for only £500,000, with ticket sales estimated at £1,250,000! Consequently, Edinburgh depended on sponsorship to cover the bulk of the costs.

(e) Competitors -

The 1986 Edinburgh Games were expected to be the largest Commonwealth Games held to date, both in terms of countries participating, approximately 55, and the number of competitors entered, approximately 3,400. Initially, CGSL underestimated the potential numbers of athletes and officials who were expected to attend. The rules of the Games did not require countries to finalise their entries until early July 1986. As a result, some of the assumptions made earlier proved unrealistic and when these were revised the planned resources available to the company became over-stretched. This situation affected the detailed planning exercise and resulted in the company incurring substantial additional expenditure. In consequence the original budget of approximately £7 million for staging the Games rose to £13.1 million in the summer and has now increased to £15 million.

(f) The Boycott -

The effect of the boycott of the Games, by over 32 countries, has been catastrophic. The company has had to enter into commitments to ensure that the Games were staged on time, for example to prepare venues for each sport. There has been virtually no opportunity at this late stage to curtail expenditure.

In addition, the boycott has had a totally detrimental impact on the company's and my personal last minute fundraising efforts. A number of potential sponsors have withdrawn from discussions and others have reduced their previously firm commitments.

(g) Government position -

There has been uncertainty over the Government's attitude to the funding difficulties in the prevailing circumstances since 1982. The Scottish Office has been kept fully informed of all developments through the participation of its Assessor, Mr Campbell, an under secretary at the Scottish Education Department, at the company's board meetings. However, there has been considerable frustration and doubt to the extent that during June 1986, when several of the directors realised that a significant deficit could potentially arise, they intimated their desire to resign from the Board. In the event, no resignations occurred, largely as a result of informal advice from the Assessor that this would be a gross over-reaction and could only result in the collapse of the company. Rightly or wrongly, directors of CGSL interpreted this as tacit Governmental support for their continued efforts.

(h) Summary -

Clearly, in the organisation of the 1986 Games, a number of grave misjudgements have occurred and serious mistakes made:

- (a) Throughout the period of preparation, there has been a lack of effective management control over the physical preparations and over financial commitments and exposure. For example a financial controller was not appointed until late 1985.
- (b) The Games organising committee failed to appreciate at the outset that without Central Governmental support the financial resources available within Scotland would be wholly inadequate to meet the cost of staging the Games at the level required.
- (c) The failure of the Consortium to meet their own target was not recognised by the board until it was too late. Inadequate control was exercised over the other fund raising activities resulting in unnecessary expenditure and waste.
- (d) An atmosphere of undue optimism has prevailed when the warning signs were clear for all to see.

Despite these difficulties, self induced and due to external circumstances, preparations for the Games are complete and they have been opened on schedule, which is a remarkable achievement for which all concerned can be proud.

3. Current Position:

On 19 June 1986, the Board of CGSL invited me to assume the chairmanship of the company. I accepted this onerous task simply because the alternative as was put to me of the immediate appointment of a Receiver with the national humiliation that this would bring both to Scotland and to the UK. Before accepting the office I telephoned you and whilst you confirmed the Government's line that no central government funds would be made available to the Games, you did assure me that if after all my efforts there was still to be a deficit, you will agree to consider my proposals.

I deputed my colleague, Mr Bryan Cowgill, Deputy Chairman of Mirror Group Newspapers, to take over the executive vice-chairmanship of the company on a full-time basis, in order to ensure that the Games opened on time, are a credit of Scotland and the U.K. as a whole and are concluded successfully. He took action to strengthen management weaknesses and establish effective financial control.

I appointed Coopers & Lybrand to provide financial monitoring services for which MGN Ltd will be paying approximately £100,000, a charge which will not fall on the Games company.

My appointment helped to provide the confidence factor that enabled the company to complete all the preparations in time for the opening.

The latest financial forecast indicates that the Games are expected to cost £15 million. Most of this sum has now been committed. The company has raised, or expects to raise during the period of the Games, approximately £5 million which, together with the estimated £6.2 million receipt from the Consortium, gives total income to date of £11.2 million.

Thus, present projections indicate a potential deficit of £3.8 million. I and the new executive team is making, and will continue to make, every effort to reduce this shortfall through rigorous control over expenditure and by instigating new fundraising activities, which include:

- (a) A national appeal backed by most of Fleet Street's papers, as well as by the Daily Record, Sunday Mail, Scotsman, Edinburgh Evening News and the DC Thomson papers.
- (b) Media committees have been established under the chairmanship of David Stevens, Chairman of United Newspapers, London, and Mr Nimmo, Editor of the Edinburgh Evening News in Scotland, with whose assistance the national awareness of, and support for, the Games has been raised successfully. This has contributed greatly to getting the national appeal for monetary support launched which has so far raised approximately £250,000.
- (c) In spite of the boycott difficulties, I have been able to raise approximately £1 million in additional sponsorship in cash for the Games. Of this sum £250,000 comes from Mirror Group Newspapers. This does not include the costs of staff seconded to the Games and approximately £1 million of advertising pages published in the Daily Record, Sunday Mail, Daily Mirror, Sunday Mirror and The People.
- (d) The appointment of an experienced executive staff to take immediate and effective action on the numerous fronts that were needed to ensure that preparations were completed on time for the launch and orderly conduct and administration of the event.

It is too early to quantify the outcome of all of these new initiatives, some of which have yet to be launched.

4. Proposal:

As mentioned above, on our present projections, there will be a shortfall of £3.8 million in funding the Games. My proposals for dealing with this are:

- (a) to continue our various fundraising activities described above;
- (b) to obtain further contributions from the major commercial supporters of the Games, both in money and in kind; and

(c) to secure from the Government an undertaking that any remaining deficit will be met from central funds. This is expected to be approximately £2 million and shall not exceed £2.5 million.

On this basis, I expect that CGSL will be able, in due course, to meet its obligations to its creditors, the vast majority of whom are small and medium sized Scottish local companies who cannot afford to sustain the size of loss that could be involved.

In the absence of such an understanding in principle, nobody else will be prepared to make the necessary sacrifice. The unpalatable alternative, largely brought about by the boycott, can only be for the directors to consider their responsibilities now. These must include putting the company into immediate liquidation. In those circumstances it is clear that the suppliers to and creditors of the Commonwealth Games will suffer total loss.

I would be pleased to provide any further information which you may require.

yours ever

16th August 1986 :

Dear Mr Jay,

As I told you this morning the Secretary of State is sorry that he could not agree to break his leave to see Mr Maxwell. Apart from the considerable practical difficulties involved, he felt that to do so would imply that the Government was preparing to change policy. He has asked me to say that it would be most unwise for the company to proceed in this expectation; and that any impression they may be giving to this effect, whether intended or not, is unwarranted. As Mr Maxwell's letter of 31 July acknowledges, the Government has made it clear on numerous occasions that no central government funds would be available for the Games.

Mr Rifkind will reply to Mr Maxwell's letter of 31 July soon after his return from holiday. In view of the postscript to the letter we are treating it as strictly confidential. If its contents become known we will draw on this letter in answering enquiries.

You sincerely,
K M Robbie

COMMONWEALTH GAMES (SCOTLAND 1986) LIMITEDFINANCE REPORT - 8 AUGUST 19861 Current Financial Position

The company has funds in hand amounting to £1,829,000. Income received and expenditure defrayed to date are as follows:-

	£'000
Income
C G Consortium	3,505
Games Company	3,362
	<hr/>
Expenditure	6,867
	5,038

2 Forecast of Financial Shortfall

The latest forecast continues to anticipate a deficit of approximately £3.4 million before taking into account the special contributions which are being sought to meet this shortfall from

- boycotting nations
- Mr Sasakawa
- H M Government
- creditor donations

The deficit remains in line with the budget which was approved by the Board on 25 June 1986. Latest forecast and original budget are summarised in the table below:-

2.1 Income; Consortium

Of the total income specifically identified of £6,419,000 we have so far received either in cash or in value of goods and/or services the sum of £4,869,000 which leaves £1,550,000 to collect. This is made up as follows:-

	£'000	£'000
Firm Contracts
Mirror Group Newspapers	250
Held by Consortium	87
Safeway	38
British Gas	37
Austin Rover	37
Others	154
	<hr/>	<hr/>
	603

Coins	140
Guinness Promotion	100
Other	65
	<hr/>	<hr/>
	681
	<hr/>	<hr/>
	1,550

The Consortium are holding on to approximately £87,000 which has been paid to them in error by various sponsors and which they claim should be offset against the commission due to them. We propose to seek immediate settlement of this amount.

There is a dispute between Nissan and the Consortium in relation to the level of TV coverage which they received. The Consortium does not appear to be addressing this dispute in a sufficiently vigorous manner and we are concerned that some compromise on the contract value may be necessary.

- written report for Consortium

The items under Other Income are inherently difficult to quantify in advance but the relatively low levels of recovery to date may mean that despite drastic cutting of the Consortium forecasts, income from these items is still over optimistic.

2.2 Income: Games

The total value of income generated by the company is anticipated to be £5,346,000. Of this £4,948,000 has now been received, leaving £398,000 to collect from the following sources:-

	£'000
The National Appeal	258
Recoveries from Third Parties	103
Other Fund Raising	37
	<hr/>

2.3 Expenditure

The latest forecast of expenditure is £15,121,000. An analysis of this sum is set out below:-

	£'000	%
Amount spent	7,987	53
Supplier invoices unpaid	1,600	11
Purchase commitments not yet invoiced	4,947	32
Estimate for additional items (including contingency)	587	4
	<hr/>	<hr/>
	15,121	100
	<hr/>	<hr/>

In the post Games period the company is now receiving invoices for goods and services for which no purchase orders had previously been raised and therefore were not recorded on the commitment register. These invoices, in the main, relate to expenditure incurred immediately prior to and during the Games when essential decisions were made without first completing the full approvals procedure. At the date of this report the total value of invoices received but not previously committed is £540,000; this reduces the available uncommitted spend to remain within forecast to £587,000. At this time it is not possible to say with certainty that this allowance will be adequate to cover all unbudgeted costs. It is likely that more invoices can be expected, and that latest forecast expenditure may be exceeded as a result.

Further details of Expenditure are contained in Appendix C.

3 Cash Flow

As noted in 1 above, we had funds in hand of £1,829,000 at 8 August 1986 before payment of the £100,000 on account to Edinburgh District Council and other smaller authorised payments.

Under the terms of the Chairman's letter to suppliers, we intend to pay all creditors under £5,000 in full and large creditors 50% of their outstanding balance on account by Monday 18 August.

Of the £7 million estimated as due or becoming due to suppliers, we have so far only received invoices for £1.6 million. On this basis 50% could be paid immediately although new invoices are currently being received faster than our ability to process them. Temporary staff may be required.

Given the effect that the letter to creditors can be expected to produce an acceleration of claims, it seems likely that our overdraft facility will be substantially utilised.

Dear Supplier and Creditor

I want to take this opportunity to thank all those who supported the XIII Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh which in spite of all the foreseen and unforeseen difficult obstacles opened on time, were successfully run and were closed last Saturday by Her Majesty The Queen at Meadowbank and, with the help of television, were seen and enjoyed by all competitors as well as almost a thousand million people around the world.

My purpose in writing to you is threefold. First, I want to thank your organisation for the part which you have played in this achievement. Second, to tell you that, on a most pessimistic basis, our deficit of expenditure over income is approximately £3.8 million.

Subject to suppliers co-operating as set out below, I expect, with the national and other fund-raising activities in hand, including our request to HM Government to make a substantial contribution themselves, coupled with the promised help of Mr Sasakawa from Japan, to pay our outstanding bills.

To help the Games I invite your organisation and all suppliers to consider making a donation to the Games which may be offset against settlement of your outstanding invoices.

In order to enable the payout to begin, it is essential that you notify the Company of all your charges, less any proposed donations, at the earliest opportunity and in any event by no later than 15 August 1986. This will enable us to quantify accurately the cash shortfall and to make formal application both to the United Kingdom Government, to the Great Britain Sasakawa Foundation of which I am Chairman, and to Mr Sasakawa's Foundation in Tokyo by the end of this month.

Our cash in hand is £1.3 million. Subject to this letter being positively responded to by all creditors, I can immediately arrange bridging finance of £1.5 million anticipating fund-raising revenues, which we expect to receive towards the end of September.

Payout - the paying of suppliers' accounts

During the next ten days we intend to pay all small and medium-size creditors in full, less any authorised deductions. Large creditors (of £5,000 and above) will receive on-account payment of between one third and one half, and the balance after all our fund-raising activities have been completed which I anticipate will be at the end of September.

Naturally, I must point out that no good purpose can be served by any creditor pressing the Company for payment until all fund-raising activities are completed by 30 September 1986. In the event of any creditor taking such action, I will not proceed with the arrangements for providing bridging finance and cease my own and my colleagues' fund-raising activities, and invite the Board to appoint a receiver or put the Company into liquidation, with the possibility of unsecured creditors receiving nothing. That is a situation which above all we are most anxious to avoid and I earnestly seek your co-operation.

Yours sincerely

Robert Maxwell

Dear Malcolm,

REPORT TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR SCOTLAND
BY THE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF
COMMONWEALTH GAMES (SCOTLAND 1986) LIMITED
CONCERNING THE COMPANY'S POSITION

Following the meeting of the board of directors on Thursday 24 July 1986, I am writing with the knowledge of my board to advise you of the current position of Commonwealth Games (Scotland 1986) Limited ("CGSL") and to make proposals to obtain certain assurances. If obtained, these will ensure that the company can continue to meet its obligations and, in due course, pay its small and medium sized creditors in full and subsequently the large ones as well subject to the other proposals set out in this paper.

This report is set out under the following principal headings:

1. Background
2. Summary of Problems
3. Current Position
4. Proposal

1. Background:

In 1978 Edinburgh was awarded the position of host to the 1986 Commonwealth Games. In order to prepare for the Games an organising committee was formed under the then Lord Provost, Mr Kenneth Borthwick.

At the outset, and since, the Government has made it clear on numerous occasions to the Games Organising Committee that no central public funds would be available to stage these Games. All funding was to be raised from local government and a variety of private sources. This had not previously been attempted either in the United Kingdom or elsewhere, apart from the last Olympics at Los Angeles. On 21 December 1982 the Organising Committee formed this company to undertake the contractual obligations necessary to stage the Games.

2. Summary of Problems:

I set out below a brief commentary on each of the main problems which faced the organisers of the Games and which have a bearing on the present situation facing the company.

(a) Organisation -

CGSL established an organisation which reflected the previous experience of those charged with staging the Games. Committees were formed to handle each of the various matters which had to be attended to. A chairman was appointed to each committee. Most of these committees carried out their tasks through an executive officer who was a fulltime employee of CGSL. These executive officers were, in the main, retired or seconded local government officers. Unfortunately, the duties and responsibilities of these executives were mainly determined by their committees, made up of part time and retired private individuals, rather than the necessary central CGSL executive direction.

In the first half of 1984 it was found that this organisation was inappropriate to a commercially funded operation. In August 1984 the board appointed a chief executive, Mr Blair Grosset (a retired former local government financial officer), to take overall responsibility for the management of the company. However very little of the previous established modus operandi changed and no effective central direction was established to plan, coordinate and implement the preparations for the Games in the needed professionally managed manner.

(b) Resource Limitations - the Scottish Dimension -

The 1986 Commonwealth Games were expected to be the biggest yet staged. The extent of the facilities necessary was underestimated and initially it was not appreciated that without central government support the resources available in Edinburgh and in Scotland were inadequate to meet the demands on the organisation. For example, the rules of the Commonwealth Games Federation state that fund raising should be confined to the host country. Astonishingly, it only gradually dawned on the Games Organising Committee that Scotland, on its own, did not have the capacity to fund such a major international event on the stipulated basis.

When this lack of resources was recognised, CGSL belatedly sought assistance from outside Scotland. Initially there was some opposition to this course of action from the English, Welsh and Northern Irish Commonwealth Games Councils which frustrated the company's efforts. These conflicts took time and effort to resolve and thus added further to the burdens facing the organisers. This episode alone underlines the amateurish approach by the Scottish side to this immense problem.

(c) Marketing and Publicity -

There has been a major failure in publicising the 1986 Commonwealth Games in Scotland and throughout the UK. There has been an alarming lack of awareness and apathy about the Games amongst the public and in the business community. This has clearly contributed to the failure by the various fund raising activities to meet their original projected targets.

Despite employing paid professional PR consultants, a major failing has been the lack of a comprehensive public relations and publicity plan from the start. For example, no attempt was made to brief the media in Scotland or London on a regular basis. Industry and commerce have not been effectively harnessed to support the activities of the company. Such publicity as was arranged was often only locally orientated and there was little or no attempt to promote the company or the Games nationally through Fleet Street or internationally.

(d) Fund Raising -

CGSL sub-contracted the main fund raising activity to C G Consortium Limited, a joint venture between Saatchi & Saatchi and Arthur Young ("the Consortium") which was formed for the purpose. Their original target was to raise £15 million from sponsorship and other activities such as the sale of commemorative coins. Twelve months ago, the Consortium advised the company that they expected to generate around £12 million with a minimum projection of £8 million. This minimum figure was raised by the Consortium to £9.5 million in December 1985 and they now admit that this was an error of judgement on their part. Notwithstanding the fact that the Consortium and the Board knew that their income projections were optimistic, CGSL nevertheless continued to plan and incur expenditure in line with the Consortium's optimistic projections.

CGSL, having sub-contracted the commercial exploitation of the Games, failed to monitor and supervise the performance of the Consortium and to amend its expenditure plans to match the falling revenue expectations.

The Consortium now admits that it consistently adopted an over-optimistic view of the prospects which incredibly seems to have been based largely on the experiences of the Los Angeles Olympic Games. On that occasion, a substantial portion of the sponsorship income was raised in the 6 months immediately prior to the event.

However, Los Angeles had covered its basic running costs from ticket money and the sale of broadcasting rights for several hundred million dollars. CGSL sold the broadcasting rights for the 1986 Commonwealth Games to the BBC for only £500,000, with ticket sales estimated at £1,250,000! Consequently, Edinburgh depended on sponsorship to cover the bulk of the costs.

(e) Competitors -

The 1986 Edinburgh Games were expected to be the largest Commonwealth Games held to date, both in terms of countries participating, approximately 55, and the number of competitors entered, approximately 3,400. Initially, CGSL underestimated the potential numbers of athletes and officials who were expected to attend. The rules of the Games did not require countries to finalise their entries until early July 1986. As a result, some of the assumptions made earlier proved unrealistic and when these were revised the planned resources available to the company became over-stretched. This situation affected the detailed planning exercise and resulted in the company incurring substantial additional expenditure. In consequence the original budget of approximately £7 million for staging the Games rose to £13.1 million in the summer and has now increased to £15 million.

(f) The Boycott -

The effect of the boycott of the Games, by over 32 countries, has been catastrophic. The company has had to enter into commitments to ensure that the Games were staged on time, for example to prepare venues for each sport. There has been virtually no opportunity at this late stage to curtail expenditure.

In addition, the boycott has had a totally detrimental impact on the company's and my personal last minute fundraising efforts. A number of potential sponsors have withdrawn from discussions and others have reduced their previously firm commitments.

(g) Government position -

There has been uncertainty over the Government's attitude to the funding difficulties in the prevailing circumstances since 1982. The Scottish Office has been kept fully informed of all developments through the participation of its Assessor, Mr Campbell, an under secretary at the Scottish Education Department, at the company's board meetings. However, there has been considerable frustration and doubt to the extent that during June 1986, when several of the directors realised that a significant deficit could potentially arise, they intimated their desire to resign from the Board. In the event, no resignations occurred, largely as a result of informal advice from the Assessor that this would be a gross over-reaction and could only result in the collapse of the company. Rightly or wrongly, directors of CGSL interpreted this as tacit Governmental support for their continued efforts.

(h) Summary -

Clearly, in the organisation of the 1986 Games, a number of grave misjudgements have occurred and serious mistakes made:

- (a) Throughout the period of preparation, there has been a lack of effective management control over the physical preparations and over financial commitments and exposure. For example a financial controller was not appointed until late 1985.
- (b) The Games organising committee failed to appreciate at the outset that without Central Governmental support the financial resources available within Scotland would be wholly inadequate to meet the cost of staging the Games at the level required.
- (c) The failure of the Consortium to meet their own target was not recognised by the board until it was too late. Inadequate control was exercised over the other fund raising activities resulting in unnecessary expenditure and waste.
- (d) An atmosphere of undue optimism has prevailed when the warning signs were clear for all to see.

Despite these difficulties, self induced and due to external circumstances, preparations for the Games are complete and they have been opened on schedule, which is a remarkable achievement for which all concerned can be proud.

3. Current Position:

On 19 June 1986, the Board of CGSL invited me to assume the chairmanship of the company. I accepted this onerous task simply because the alternative as was put to me of the immediate appointment of a Receiver with the national humiliation that this would bring both to Scotland and to the UK. Before accepting the office I telephoned you and whilst you confirmed the Government's line that no central government funds would be made available to the Games, you did assure me that if after all my efforts there was still to be a deficit, you will agree to consider my proposals.

I deputed my colleague, Mr Bryan Cowgill, Deputy Chairman of Mirror Group Newspapers, to take over the executive vice-chairmanship of the company on a full-time basis, in order to ensure that the Games opened on time, are a credit of Scotland and the U.K. as a whole and are concluded successfully. He took action to strengthen management weaknesses and establish effective financial control.

I appointed Coopers & Lybrand to provide financial monitoring services for which MGN Ltd will be paying approximately £100,000, a charge which will not fall on the Games company.

My appointment helped to provide the confidence factor that enabled the company to complete all the preparations in time for the opening.

The latest financial forecast indicates that the Games are expected to cost £15 million. Most of this sum has now been committed. The company has raised, or expects to raise during the period of the Games, approximately £5 million which, together with the estimated £6.2 million receipt from the Consortium, gives total income to date of £11.2 million.

Thus, present projections indicate a potential deficit of £3.8 million. I and the new executive team is making, and will continue to make, every effort to reduce this shortfall through rigorous control over expenditure and by instigating new fundraising activities, which include:

- (a) A national appeal backed by most of Fleet Street's papers, as well as by the Daily Record, Sunday Mail, Scotsman, Edinburgh Evening News and the DC Thomson papers.
- (b) Media committees have been established under the chairmanship of David Stevens, Chairman of United Newspapers, London, and Mr Nimmo, Editor of the Edinburgh Evening News in Scotland, with whose assistance the national awareness of, and support for, the Games has been raised successfully. This has contributed greatly to getting the national appeal for monetary support launched which has so far raised approximately £250,000.
- (c) In spite of the boycott difficulties, I have been able to raise approximately £1 million in additional sponsorship in cash for the Games. Of this sum £250,000 comes from Mirror Group Newspapers. This does not include the costs of staff seconded to the Games and approximately £1 million of advertising pages published in the Daily Record, Sunday Mail, Daily Mirror, Sunday Mirror and The People.
- (d) The appointment of an experienced executive staff to take immediate and effective action on the numerous fronts that were needed to ensure that preparations were completed on time for the launch and orderly conduct and administration of the event.

It is too early to quantify the outcome of all of these new initiatives, some of which have yet to be launched.

4. Proposal:

As mentioned above, on our present projections, there will be a shortfall of £3.8 million in funding the Games. My proposals for dealing with this are:

- (a) to continue our various fundraising activities described above;
- (b) to obtain further contributions from the major commercial supporters of the Games, both in money and in kind; and

(c) to secure from the Government an undertaking that any remaining deficit will be met from central funds. This is expected to be approximately £2 million and shall not exceed £2.5 million.

On this basis, I expect that CGSL will be able, in due course, to meet its obligations to its creditors, the vast majority of whom are small and medium sized Scottish local companies who cannot afford to sustain the size of loss that could be involved.

In the absence of such an understanding in principle, nobody else will be prepared to make the necessary sacrifice. The unpalatable alternative, largely brought about by the boycott, can only be for the directors to consider their responsibilities now. These must include putting the company into immediate liquidation. In those circumstances it is clear that the suppliers to and creditors of the Commonwealth Games will suffer total loss.

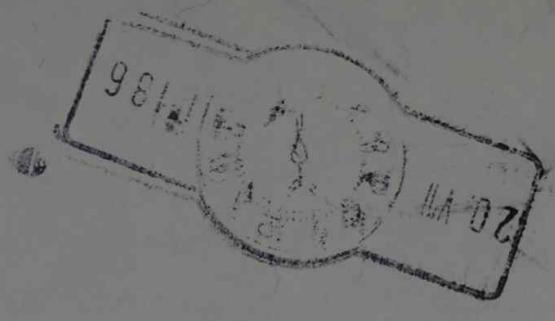

I would be pleased to provide any further information which you may require.

Yours ever

R.M.

Mr. Rajiv Gandhi,
Prime Minister,
Republic of India.

Dear Prime Minister,

I was glad to learn of your message that your decision to withdraw Indian athletes from the Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh in no way detracts from India's feelings of friendship for Scotland.

It is fair to say, however, that there is bitter disappointment among the people of Edinburgh, of Scotland and of the Commonwealth at large that India is not represented at an event to which they attached such importance, and upon which so many hopes rested. Furthermore, India's last-minute withdrawal resulted in considerable financial loss to the Games organisers, both in lost sponsorship and in the cost of residential accommodation and other facilities which were prepared for the Republic of India team and not taken up.

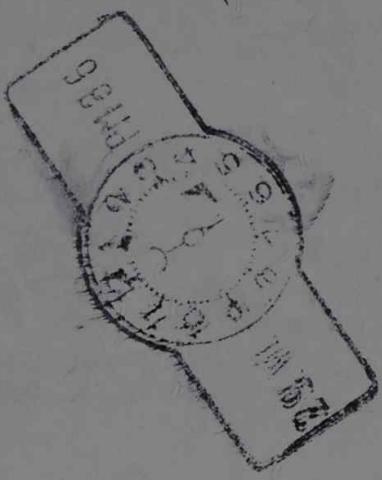

I trust, therefore, that in the spirit of your public statement of friendship for the Scottish people your Government will pay its fair share of the financial loss which the Games have suffered as a direct result of your last-minute decision to boycott them and that this financial burden will not fall upon the ratepayers of Edinburgh and the people of Scotland generally.

Yours sincerely

Robert Maxwell

PRIME MINISTER

The Foreign Office have been informed by the Indian High Commission of an announcement shortly going to be made in New Delhi. The gist of it is that they will be withdrawing from the Commonwealth Games on the basis that recent statements by HMG have indicated that they are not prepared to follow the steps as agreed in the Bahamas/Nassau Accord and they said that if HMG would show that they would be prepared to adopt the measures outlined in the Accord it would facilitate reconsideration of the decision.

The Foreign Secretary has been told and the Head of Cultural Relations Department is informing sporting authorities over here.

NOTE FOR THE RECORD

COMMONWEALTH GAMES

I took a call this afternoon at 1730 from Mr. Peter Marshall of the Commonwealth Secretariat.

He said that Sonny Ramphal had been in touch with Rajiv Gandhi and Brian Mulroney with the idea of putting to the Prime Minister, KK, and Mugabe (keeping Hawke and Pindling in touch) the idea of a joint statement by the Seven to read as follows:

"We are agreed that in the context of no progress during the six month period envisaged in the Nassau Accord, we shall work at the forthcoming meeting in London for agreement on measures against South Africa designed to advance the prospect of negotiations for ending apartheid, and erecting structures of democracy in South Africa. Given our resolve to work together to these ends, we hope that all our colleagues can join us in wishing the Commonwealth Games every success and in working to achieve this."

Sonny Ramphal would, if the Prime Minister agreed with the statement, quickly inform the Heads of all those countries who had withdrawn from the Commonwealth Games and of course all other members of the Commonwealth.

He further proposed that Mulroney would call the Prime Minister shortly to get the Prime Minister's view in order if possible to prevent India from withdrawing from the Games, on which a decision was due within a few hours. But Mulroney wanted to know the reception he was likely to receive before making the phone call.

Marshall further said that in his view the reference to "no

"progress" was unlikely to be acceptable to the Prime Minister, and there might be some scope for amendment, e.g., to refer to "lack of progress", though if the Prime Minister were to seek a change of that kind then others themselves would seek changes. The text had been designed so far as possible not to pre-judge the Marlborough House Conference, but to go far enough to get others off the hook.

I then telephoned the Prime Minister and explained the position in the order set out above. The Prime Minister interrupted me half way through the text of the statement to say that she could not agree to it. There could be no joint statement because there had been no joint meeting. Of course, if individual States wanted to issue statements on their own behalf, that was a matter for them. The statement sought to pre-empt discussion at the Conference. She was not willing to agree a statement of this kind at short notice, over the telephone, and with no opportunity to consult colleagues. She also noted that some progress had been made during the past six months, and referred to changes in the pass laws.

I relayed this view to Peter Marshall, who was not surprised. He asked me whether I thought there was any point in trying to take this further next week. I emphasised very strongly that this was not my area, and my judgement could not be relied upon. But if the Commonwealth Secretariat wanted to take this further next week, they would clearly need to find a way around the objections which the Prime Minister had already advanced.

Peter Marshall rang me back again 5 or 10 minutes after our previous conversation, and after he had reported that to Sonny Ramphal. He said he would like advice on what to do. Would there be any point in Mulroney talking to the Prime Minister? Were there any grounds for telling Gandhi to hold his horses? I again emphasised my lack of expertise in this area. I said, however, that there did not seem much point in Mulroney talking to the Prime Minister unless there were a new proposition to put to her, and in that event it would anyway be better for the idea to be tried out through me first. Marshall accepted this. He then started to throw around ideas, e.g., that Sonny Ramphal might issue a statement which would say he was aware of contacts which were continuing between those concerned in this matter, with a view to trying to prevent further withdrawals from the Games. I said that was of course a matter for him, but it seemed to me likely that a statement of that kind would be offering a false prospectus. That was where the matter was left.

I then reported these developments to Tony Galsworthy, duty Private Secretary in the Foreign Office.

At 1900 Mr. Mulroney telephoned the Prime Minister. Mr. Mulroney said he had heard from Rajiv Gandhi this morning, who had received Mr. Mulroney's strong message urging him to send a team to the Commonwealth Games. Gandhi had said that he wanted to send a delegation, but was under enormous pressure, from Parliament and elsewhere, not to do so. Mulroney said he had told Gandhi that to refuse to send a delegation to the Games would be the worst thing to do. The Prime Minister agreed, noting that India and the Commonwealth had been through many more testing difficulties than those that faced them at present.

Mr. Mulroney then referred to the text of the possible joint statement by the Seven which is quoted above.

The Prime Minister said the statement could not be accepted. It would mean a commitment to "measures". It would be wrong to make such a commitment before the meeting, and the Prime Minister said she would like to meet. She wanted to talk in friendliness, and she would be heart-broken if the Indians did not attend the Games. There were other reasons too why no commitment could be made now; the European Community partners had to be taken into account; Secretary Shultz was due give evidence next week; and President Reagan was expected to make a speech in this area. The message would not do. But in any event the Seven had not met, so there could be no message.

Nevertheless, it was a thoughtful idea. The Prime Minister said that Mr. Mulroney could have more influence than any message. It would be a tragedy if the Commonwealth countries could not talk together, but it was "almost blackmail" when countries threatened not to attend the Commonwealth Games. This was not a way for members of the same organisation to behave. The Prime Minister emphasised that she was most grateful for all the effort which Mr. Mulroney was making.

The tone of the conversation was friendly.

Dear Mr. Wicks,

We have been asked to bring to the Prime Minister's attention the text of a message which Prime Minister Mulroney has addressed to Prime Minister Thatcher about participation in the Edinburgh Commonwealth Games. It is Mr. Mulroney's hope that appeals from Canada and other countries will make it easier for Britain to take appropriate action to save the Commonwealth Games. Similar messages have been addressed to the Heads of Government of Ghana, Nigeria, Uganda, Kenya, Tanzania, Zambia, Zimbabwe, India, Malaysia, Bahamas, Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago.

The Right Honourable
Margaret Thatcher, M.P.

Dear Margaret,

The Secretary-General of the Commonwealth has written to all of us about means of ensuring full participation in the Commonwealth Games. I want to support Sonny Ramphal's position. This is something that Canadian athletes and indeed Canadians everywhere, who value the traditions of the Commonwealth, would very much like to see.

The Secretary-General referred to the timely decision of the Commonwealth Games Federation. He noted that the decision showed the Commonwealth's capacity to get it right in the end and opened a window of opportunity in the political area for a return to the politics of Commonwealth consensus. He asked all not to foreclose the opportunity of athletes going to Edinburgh.

I am sending this message to endorse the Secretary-General's appeal. We have the opportunity at our meeting in London to consider further steps in implementing the Nassau Accord. We all know the difficulties which face us but I hope we will not, in the interim, act in such a way to compound those difficulties. Such a situation would only give comfort to Pretoria.

I hope therefore that the decisions you and others take will render it possible for athletes from every part of the Commonwealth to take part in the Edinburgh Games.

Yours sincerely,

Brian

17 July 1986

EXTRACT FROM SPEECH BY THE COMMONWEALTH SECRETARY-GENERAL SHRIDATH RAMPHAL, OPENING THE COMMONWEALTH PHOTOGRAPHY EXHIBITION, EDINBURGH, 17 JULY, 1986

"Today is my first visit to Scotland in the context of the 13th Commonwealth Games. I cannot, therefore, refrain from expressing my regret at the shadow that has fallen across them; but I have not abandoned hope for my effort to retrieve the situation.

I have had no hesitation in making this effort. The decisions on non-eligibility recently taken, and rightly taken, on technical grounds allow us to make the Games a notable festival of 'Commonwealth Athletes Against Apartheid' - which, of course, is the reality of the Commonwealth's multiracial Games held in conformity with the Gleneagles Declaration and the Brisbane Code of Conduct. Let us not be hesitant, therefore, in so proclaiming them.

And let us have from south of the border equally clear statements at the highest political level of an intent to work for agreement with the Commonwealth on a programme of effective sanctions against South Africa in the face of no adequate progress towards dismantling apartheid and establishing structures of democracy in South Africa. We have lost too much time already. There is not much left. All must help if we are to give the Games the chance they have earned and to give Scotland and the Commonwealth the chance they deserve. The essential step has to be taken in London; it has to be clearly seen to be taken; and it has to be seen now. Even tomorrow could be too late. And, meanwhile, the option of coming to Edinburgh must not be foreclosed for the athletes of the Commonwealth.

Dear Charles,

South Africa : Further withdrawals from the Commonwealth Games

The Foreign Secretary is seriously concerned that the decisions announced today by Malaysia and the Bahamas to withdraw from the Commonwealth Games, coupled with the likelihood of further Africa withdrawals after the Front Line States meeting on 18 July, may lead to a more extensive unravelling of the Games.

The Foreign Minister of Trinidad told our High Commissioner yesterday that there was now a serious risk that CARICOM as a whole might decide to withdraw. He added that CARICOM governments would be looking very carefully at the Prime Minister's remarks in the House in the immediate future. We have heard that Jamaica is also considering withdrawal. There is of course also a potentially more serious possibility of other measures being concerted against UK interests at the Front Line States meeting.

We have already lobbied Commonwealth Governments against withdrawal. There is no further effective action High Commissions can take without fresh ammunition. As the Prime Minister knows, in Sir Geoffrey's view the problem is that because of our vigorous and persistent public opposition to comprehensive economic sanctions many Commonwealth leaders now see us as the main defender of the South African Government and of apartheid.

/In

In order to start putting that right the Foreign Secretary included a strong attack on apartheid in his Commons speech this afternoon. But he believes that it would also be extremely helpful if the Prime Minister could reinforce the message at Question Time tomorrow. Conversely it could be dangerous if the Prime Minister were to take a different line. But if she took that opportunity herself to deliver a strong attack on apartheid, and coupled that with a reference similar to that used by the Foreign Secretary this afternoon to the likely need for further measures should his mission not produce tangible and substantial results, the addition of her authority would greatly help our efforts to stem the tide of withdrawals.

/ I enclose an indication of the sort of thing the Foreign Secretary has in mind.

Yours ever,

Colin Galsworthy

SOUTH AFRICA : POSSIBLE NOTE FOR SUPPLEMENTARIES

Apartheid

- want to nail the lie that [redacted] opposition of HMG to comprehensive economic sanctions in any way represents support or sympathy for apartheid.
- reiterate my total rejection of apartheid and all it stands for.
- racial discrimination in any form totally repugnant and morally objectionable.
- apartheid also economic and practical nonsense: cannot develop a modern society by segregating people on a racial basis.

Further Measures

- as we have already told the House, certain contingency plans outlined in The Hague communique are being made.
- there is no automaticity in this. But as my rt hon and learned Friend told the House yesterday (16 July) if his mission does not achieve tangible and substantial progress in South Africa then agreement on some further measures is likely to be necessary.

I enclose a copy of a letter to the Prime Minister from the Commonwealth Secretary General about the Commonwealth Games. I suppose it is intended to be helpful, although I am not sure that it will be regarded as such by the Prime Minister. I am inclined to think that a reply is not required since the Prime Minister has so recently seen the Secretary General. Perhaps you would let me know if you disagree.

Dear Eric Minshull,

In an address to the Diplomatic and Commonwealth Writers Association in London tomorrow, I am referring to yesterday's decision of the Commonwealth Games Federation on the non-eligibility of Zola Budd and Annette Cowley in the following terms:

"The Commonwealth Games Federation has set a worthy example in their decision on the non-eligibility of two South African-born athletes. These were, of course, technical decisions taken in conformity with the rules of the Games. They do, however, contribute to lowering of tension and to a renewal of confidence in the capacity of the Commonwealth to get it right at the end. This contribution is no small gain. More important, however, it opens a window of opportunity in the political area for a return to the politics of Commonwealth consensus. While it remains open, I urge all Commonwealth countries to keep open as well their option of coming to Edinburgh. But that window has to be kept open everywhere, especially in London."

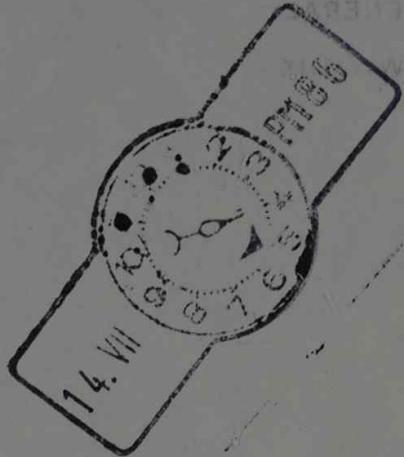

I am sending a copy of this excerpt from my speech to other Commonwealth Heads of Government. I am writing to appeal to you in the light of our own conversations and those you have had recently in Canada to use the opportunity which I sense is at hand to acknowledge the potential for consensus in August, whatever present differences may be. I feel we all owe it to Scotland, to Edinburgh and the Games, no less than to the Commonwealth, to make a really supreme effort.

With deep respect,

Shridath S. Ramphal

SUMMARY

1. MEA HAVE NOT YET TAKEN A DECISION, BUT SAY THEY WOULD FIND IT DIFFICULT TO REFUSE AN AFRICAN REQUEST TO BOYCOTT THE GAMES. OUR CANADIAN AND AUSTRALIAN COLLEAGUES SHARE OUR IMPRESSION THAT INDIA DOES NOT (NOT) WANT TO PULL OUT. THE TEAM'S DEPARTURE HAS, HOWEVER, BEEN DELAYED UNTIL THE OUTCOME OF AN 18 JULY MEETING IN HARARE IS KNOWN.

DETAIL

2. SHAHRIA (DEPUTY HEAD OF AFRICA DIVISION, MEA) WITH WHOM WE CARRIED OUT YOUR INSTRUCTIONS AS HEAD OF DIVISION WAS NOT AVAILABLE, AND SECRETARY (DUS) IS AWAY. TOLD US THERE IS A GENERAL BELIEF IN INDIAN OFFICIAL CIRCLES THAT THE PROCESS OF "COMMONWEALTH DISINTEGRATION" SHOULD STOP. ALTHOUGH DEVELOPMENTS WITHIN SOUTH AFRICA WERE DISASTROUS, "LET'S NOT ADD TO IT". HE HAD SEEN THE TEXT OF MR KINNOCK'S LETTER TO THE INDIAN HIGH COMMISSIONER (YOUR TELNO 249 TO NAIROBI), AND COMMENTED THAT THE POINTS HE MADE WERE "VERY VALID". HOWEVER SHAHRIA SAID THAT INDIA WOULD FIND IT DIFFICULT TO REFUSE IF THE AFRICANS ASKED HER TO BOYCOTT THE GAMES. THEY HAD AS YET NOT DONE SO.

THEY HAD AS YET NOT DONE SO.

3. THERE HAS BEEN PRACTICALLY NO DEBATE IN THE INDIAN PRESS ABOUT WHETHER INDIA SHOULD BOYCOTT. THE PRESS HAVE PROMINENTLY REPORTED RECEPTIONS GIVEN FOR THE INDIAN TEAM BY PRESIDENT ZAIL SINGH AND OTHERS. ONE PAPER COMMENTED THAT INDIA HAS TRADITIONALLY AVOIDED SPORTS BOYCOTTS.

4. THE INDIAN OLYMPIC ASSOCIATION HAS, HOWEVER, TODAY TOLD THE FEDERATION OF INDIAN ATHLETES THAT THEY SHOULD DELAY THE DEPARTURE OF THE INDIAN CONTINGENT. THE OFFICIAL MEA SPOKESMAN TOLD THE BBC (TULLY) THIS EVENING THAT INDIA SHARED THE INDIGNATION FELT BY AFRICAN COUNTRIES. HE SAID THAT A FINAL DECISION ON INDIAN PARTICIPATION WOULD BE TAKEN AFTER A MEETING OF AFRICAN COUNTRIES IN HARARE ON 18 JULY, WHEN A COLLECTIVE AFRICAN DECISION IS EXPECTED.

COMMENT

5. WE HAVE BEEN KEEPING IN CLOSE TOUCH WITH OUR AUSTRALIAN AND CANADIAN COLLEAGUES (THE AUSTRALIANS ARE PROVIDING COACHING FOR THE INDIAN TEAM). BOTH HAVE SO FAR SHARED OUR ASSESSMENT THAT THE INDIANS WISHED TO ATTEND THE GAMES. BUT IF THE AFRICANS DO DECIDE ON A COLLECTIVE BOYCOTT, THERE IS EVERY LIKELIHOOD THAT INDIA WILL JOIN THEM.

LONDON.

Dear Prime Minister,

MWB

I am writing to express my own personal appreciation and also that of the XIII Commonwealth Games Organising Committee for the very splendid evening hosted by yourself at No. 10 on Monday evening.

It was a very memorable occasion for us all and one which we will all treasure.

It is a great privilege to be involved in the organisation of the Commonwealth Games and the fact that the Games Organisation has been recognised by your goodself as Prime Minister is very gratifying and encouraging.

The strengthening of the bonds throughout the Commonwealth is one of the main purposes for the continuation of the Games and having the accolade of being recognised by the Prime Minister is very significant indeed.

We look forward to a very successful Games this year in the knowledge that you will be with us in person.

With sincere thanks and kind regards.

Yours sincerely,

I am sorry that it has taken so long to reply to your letter of 19 August to the Prime Minister with which you enclosed a progress report on the preparations for the 1986 Commonwealth Games. Mrs. Thatcher was interested to read your report and was grateful to be kept informed of the very considerable amount of work which is being done. She will be grateful if you would convey to the committees and staff of the Games organisation, her appreciation for the work that they are performing for the Commonwealth. The importance of this work is all the more apparent with the Commonwealth Heads of Governments Meeting in the next fortnight. Mrs. Thatcher hopes that you will continue to keep her in touch with developments and in this context she is delighted that you are working so closely with the Secretary of State for Scotland.

I have been considering very carefully how you might respond to the approach you have received from Mr Kenneth Borthwick, the Chairman of the XIII Commonwealth Games organisation, about which your Private Secretary consulted mine over a month ago. I am sorry about the delay in forming a view. I have of course already had cause to consult you about our relations with the Games organisers in my minute of 1 August. These relations require careful handling. There is the added complication - to which your office drew our attention - of the need to act consistently as between next year's Commonwealth Games and Birmingham's bid for the 1992 Olympics. We also do not know what kind of handling the Games will be given at the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting later this month.

Mr Borthwick's approach is ostensibly no more than a courteous offer of briefing. Lying behind it however are his earlier attempts to persuade you to visit his headquarters in Edinburgh and his continuing concern about funding. I do not think that you need seriously consider a meeting with Mr Borthwick to discuss his report. We know perfectly well what issues he wants to discuss from the meeting he had with me in July. A special visit to Edinburgh to see the Games headquarters could be useful as a public gesture of support which would be seen as such by a wide public, including potential sponsors. A gesture of this kind could well be valuable: indeed my Permanent Secretary is in touch with Sir Antony Acland about how it might best be achieved. The difficulty with a special visit to Games headquarters, however, is that it would put you to the inconvenience of a time-consuming visit to Scotland. I would prefer therefore to consider other options, leaving the possibility of a headquarters visit over for your programme in Scotland next May when it would be popular with our supporters and come at a good time for associating ourselves with what by then will no doubt be rising public excitement.

The most pressing need is to give the organisers some unobtrusive but practical help with their problems over fund-raising. One way of doing this might be to look again at the idea which I put to you in August of offering hospitality to a carefully selected group of potential major sponsors. A small party at No 10 or at Chequers would help the organisers with their difficulties over making good contacts at boardroom level. It would avoid the difficulty - which arose with the earlier idea of writing individual letters of introduction - that we might appear to be intruding on what should be the organisers own responsibilities. An informal event of this kind would also give appropriate expression to the carefully balanced attitude which you have told Mr Howell you would wish to adopt in relation to becoming a Patron of Birmingham's bid for the 1992 Olympics.

Now is not a good time to consider a gesture of support for the Games because of the uncertainties associated with the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting. I would hope, however, that once the meeting is over you might be prepared to look at the idea afresh. We would be able to concert a guest list with the organisers once you have decided whether or not to fit an event of this kind into your programme. In principle it might be based on the list I sent you in August, revised as necessary to suit the occasion and possibly leavened with some of the existing major sponsors of the Games. In the meantime I would suggest that you need do no more than send Mr Borthwick a polite acknowledgement of his letter through your Private Secretary. A possible draft is attached.

I am sending copies of this minute to Geoffrey Howe, Kenneth Baker, Leon Brittan and Sir Robert Armstrong.

I enclose a copy of a letter from Mr. Kenneth Borthwick, Chairman of the 13th Commonwealth Games, to the Prime Minister updating her on the progress being made with the arrangements for the Games. Mr. Borthwick rang me last week to say he would be glad of a chance to report to the Prime Minister personally; I explained that diary considerations meant such a meeting would be very difficult indeed to fit in for some time, and Mr. Borthwick undertook to write instead. I should be grateful for a draft reply the Prime Minister might send Mr. Borthwick.

You may remember that, back in May, we indicated to Mr. Borthwick that we would get in touch with him in due course about the possibility of the Prime Minister visiting the Games headquarters. I think we should continue to leave that possibility open for the moment, and that we should not refer to it in the reply.

Dear Prime Minister,

Because we are now in our final year of preparation for the Commonwealth Games to be held here in 1986, I feel it is appropriate to provide you with information as to the stage we have now reached.

The best way to do so is to put before you a report. This shows the breadth of the undertaking and the wide range of responsibility.

It is impossible, however, to show the degree of loyalty those involved have for the task in hand or the immense enthusiasm they have for the Commonwealth. Although "Games" is the key what it opens up is the concept of closer Commonwealth unity.

I would wish you to know, therefore, the part we are playing in strengthening the ties among so many Commonwealth countries.

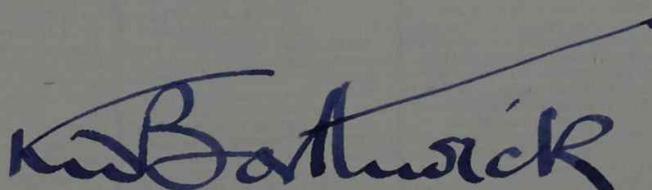

I would hope that the accompanying report would go some way to demonstrate this.

It may be possible at some time in the future that I and my Chief Executive could have the opportunity of calling upon you to further inform you of the Games Organisation's progress.

The Secretary of State for Scotland, Mr. George Younger, is of course au fait with our planning and is most sympathetic to our mission. I know that my Executive Committee is most appreciative of Government interest and I look forward to your esteemed personal interest.

With kind regards.

MR FLESHER

I have seen a copy of the minute which the Secretary of State for Scotland sent to the Prime Minister on 1 August about the prospects for the Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh next year.

2. I have some reservations about the Prime Minister leading a fund-raising campaign and sending the kind of "begging letter" proposed by the Secretary of State. It seems to me that it would be better if the organisers (or conceivably the Secretary of State himself) approached potential sponsors in the first instance. That approach could perhaps be followed up with a rather shorter letter from the Prime Minister, of a more general nature, about the value of the Games. Such a letter might be on the lines of the draft attached. But I was relieved to see (your letter of 8 August) that she prefers not to get involved at all: I am sure that that would be best.

DRAFT LETTER FROM THE PRIME MINISTER

I gather that you have been approached by the Chairman of the Organising Committee for the Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh next year about the possibility of your company providing sponsorship for the Games and becoming involved in the marketing opportunities which the Games have to offer.

Next to the Olympics, the Commonwealth Games are the most important fixture in the international sporting calendar. They have been free of many of the political problems which have dogged the Olympics; they have always demonstrated a high degree of sporting achievement and sportsmanship; and they are a valuable demonstration of the reality of the Commonwealth in action. And, of course, quite apart from the competitors and supporters who come to them from over 40 Commonwealth countries all round the world, they can be expected to reach some 500 million television viewers.

This is the first time that the organisers of the Commonwealth Games have looked for sponsorship as their main source of income. I hope very much that you and your company will be able to think seriously about the approach which the Chairman of the Organising Committee has made to you: the success of the Games could depend upon it.

10 DOWNING STREET

From the Private Secretary

8 August 1985

Dear John,

The Prime Minister has now seen your Secretary of State's minute of 1 August about the Commonwealth Games. She recognises the need for the organisers to attract more private sponsorship for the Games but does not think it appropriate for the Prime Minister to write letters to industrialists seeking such assistance. In her view this must come from the organisers themselves. In this context she believes that the Government will have to tread extremely carefully, especially now that Birmingham's bid for the 1992 Olympics has been entered.

I am sending copies of this to Peter Ricketts (Foreign and Commonwealth Office), Alan Davis (Department of the Environment), John Mogg (Department of Trade and Industry) and Richard Hatfield (Cabinet Office).

PRIME MINISTER

COMMONWEALTH GAMES

Attached is a minute from the Scottish Secretary seeking your help in raising money for the Commonwealth Games, about which Sir Russell Fairgrieve came to see you earlier this year. Of the £12 million needed to mount the Games only about £4 million is at present in sight. Mr. Younger thinks that the Government has to weigh in with help for the fund-raising efforts. What he proposes is that you should write to leading industrialists essentially asking them to contribute money although the draft letter is couched in rather more general terms, e.g. would they be prepared to see the Chairman of the Organising Committee? The message is nevertheless clear.

All of us have considerable reservations about whether you should do this:

- (i) I think it is slightly demeaning for the Prime Minister to write what may be interpreted as begging letters to industrialists in whatever cause.
- (ii) I am wary about your getting too closely identified with Edinburgh which has after all the most left wing council in Scotland.
- (iii) The conduct by Edinburgh Council of a major athletics meeting there two weeks ago when their refusal to take down anti-apartheid banners and their whipping up of anti-Zola Budd demonstrations has led to considerable questions about the competence of the Council to stage the Games.

This does not mean to say that the Government should remain neutral: indeed, as with the Olympics we cannot afford to seem to be indifferent. But it does suggest that George Younger rather than yourself should take the initiative.

There are also implications for the Olympic Games here. If you do this for the Commonwealth Games, you will have to do so several times over for the Olympics if Birmingham's bid were successful.

Do you agree to suggest that George Younger should write the letters which he suggests while at the same time making clear your willingness to help in another way, e.g. by holding some form of reception?

(Tim Flesher)

D. I am not going to sign letters asking for money.

The organisations must do that.

With the Birmingham bid for the

7 August 1985

Olympics coming up, I must not be involved in this one. Reasons - I don't

Like you I have been taking a close interest in prospects for the Commonwealth Games in July next year. The Government is not involved financially although our support was crucial to the success of Edinburgh's bid to act as host city. I was, therefore, concerned when the Chairman of the organisers called on me last week to seek Government help in obtaining sponsorship. There is no crisis; indeed most sponsors tend not to come forward until the last 8 months before an event of this kind takes place. But of the £12 million or so needed to mount the Games only about £4 million is at present in prospect; and the organisers believe that now is the right moment for a major effort.

In discussing how Government could help we came to the conclusion that what was most needed was a top level approach designed to open board room doors of a carefully selected group of major companies. Middle management, seeing all the controversy which surrounds these Games, is reluctant to recommend any major commitment. At the top level it should be more obvious that controversy has become an inseparable part of the international sporting scene - and may, indeed, be something of an index of the importance of the event concerned. While I do not minimise the vulnerability of the Commonwealth Games to political pressures such as those related to South Africa, I see no reason to hedge our bets. The great public interest and support which the Games have always attracted should see them through.

I am sure you would agree that it would be entirely proper for us to help the organisers in the way they ask. It would be consistent with our encouragement of sponsorship in other fields. Timing would be excellent. With just a year to go it is not too soon to approach senior industrialists. On the other hand there would be no suggestion of last minute panic. To be really effective I would hope the approach might come from you. This would carry enormous weight and in itself demonstrate Government commitment. The organisers and their financial advisers have provided us with the enclosed list of the companies which, in the light of the work they have already done, they hope you would be prepared to approach. If you agree, you might wish to use the enclosed draft letter. It is phrased in fairly broad terms, as I am sure we should avoid appearing to ask for favours. Its purpose is simply to give the organisers an introduction. The rest would be up to them.

In the Autumn, when we have had an opportunity to take stock of this initiative, I hope you may be prepared to consider offering hospitality to a selected group of individuals from whom major sponsorship has either been obtained or could be in serious prospect. This might be just the catalyst that the fund raisers require. However we would need to look at the position in the light of developments meanwhile.

I am sending copies of this letter to Geoffrey Howe, Patrick Jenkin, Norman Tebbit and to Sir Robert Armstrong. I hope they too will bear in mind the possibility of dropping the occasional word about the Games in the ear of potential sponsors.

DRAFT LETTER FOR THE PRIME MINISTER TO SEND TO

Chairman/Chief Executives on Distribution List

I have been enquiring about progress on the Commonwealth Games, which are to be held in Edinburgh in July next year. All the general arrangements are on course but I understand that the Organising Committee are experiencing some reluctance now at a key stage in their efforts to encourage Industry and Commerce to become involved in the marketing opportunities which the Games have to offer.

This is the first time that the organisers of the Commonwealth Games are looking for sponsorship as their main source of income: indeed the Government's support for a British bid to play host to the event was given only on this understanding. The run-up to the Games has already been the subject of some controversy. Inevitably the novelty of the approach have made potential sponsors cautious. Uncertainties of this kind are, however, perhaps a sign of the importance of the fixture concerned - and, next to the Olympics, the Commonwealth Games are the most important fixture in the international sporting calendar. The Government and the organisers are confident that the Games will take place and take place successfully. From the point of view of potential sponsors the crucial fact is the immense audience which the Games will reach: some 500 million TV viewers can be expected world-wide.

As the opportunities involved in the Games become more imminent there will no doubt be a quickening of commercial interest. The opportunities are, however, there to be grasped already. It would help the organisers enormously if top management could take a personal stock of their own interest now. The Chairman of the Games Organising Committee, Mr Kenneth W Borthwick, CBE, intends to approach you before the end of September in the hope of bringing matters to a head. May I ask you to respond by being prepared to give him and the Commonwealth Games twenty minutes of your time? I am sure you will find it well worth your while.
