10 DOWNING STREET

From the Press Secretary

19 July 1979

I am afraid the situation has not changed since we met fleetingly on the train to Glyndebourne.

You will recall that you wrote just after the Election seeking an interview with the Prime Minister. I am sorry to say that her preoccupations are such that she is not inclined to grant interviews of this kind in the foreseeable future.

However, I have taken note of your interest, and shall certainly contact you if the situation should change. But you should know that the Prime Minister is at the moment rather disinclined to engage in discussions outside her responsibilities as Prime Minister.

With best wishes.
