23rd February, 1979

Our dinner at the Bank on Thursday night confirmed, as I expected, that they are not out of sympathy with our approach to exchange control, as described in your letter of 12th February and Nigel Lawson's of 21st February. One of the subjects on which they would expect to have ready a paper for discussion with us on arrival in office will set out alternatives and their recommendations for dealing with this subject.
