Gov called on 16 17/2

The Governor spoke to John Wiggins this morning. He said that he had not so far intervened on the question of the Clearing Banks' levy, but he wished to have one private word on the subject with the Chancellor before irrevocable decisions were taken. The Governor emphasised that he was not intending to intervene "in a great way". Wiggins replied that there was no inextricable commitment to the levy until it was actually announced. It was left provisionally that the Governor would call on the Chancellor at 8.45 am on Tuesday, 17 February.
