Dear Prime Minister,

It was so very kind of you to ask all the Scottish members and our wives to Chequers yesterday. Thank you very much indeed.

You gave us the most delicious lunch and a fascinating tour of the house and all its treasures - I had no idea it was so richly endowed.

I know my wife Sandy will be writing to thank you for us both, but I wanted to mention particularly how much

I appreciate a gesture of this kind which means so much to our wives. As you know, they have to put up with a lot as a result of our political activities both at Westminster and in the constituency.

So it is particularly thoughtful of you to have invited us all to Chequers, so that they could share with us this special treat.

Thank you again, so much.

Yours very sincerely,

Alan
