Dear Mr. Home,

For once my indignation has been powerful enough to make me finish an article for you before I put the draft aside to continue with the draft on a major book which I regard as my main duty at my advanced age. It seems to me to be really urgent that these things are be frankly said and they clearly could not be compressed into the space of a letter.

I had to type the article myself on vacation and do not wish now to keep it for the usual week or so before I can myself eliminate my tedious sentences, and if you wish to use the article you may of course regard yourself as authorized to improve its style; also, if necessary, to abbreviate it.

Sincerely yours,

F. A. Hayek
