A discussion took place at the Management Committee in the Central Office this morning about the priority of subjects for discussion during the summer recess. It is not of course for me to determine what priorities speakers choose in meetings which they hold during this period, but for your information I would remind you that in the surveys which have been carried out by the Research Department there are four topics which rate very high in public interest. They are Housing, Law and Order, the question of Tax Reduction and the Provision of Incentives to Wealth and Job Creators, and finally Education.
