

15 September 1980

Mr. William Rees-Magg
Editor, The Times
New Printing House Square
London WCX1 8 EZ

I started the enclosed as an intended letter to the editor, but it clearly could not be condensed into the space of one, but the effort at compression may have also made it unsuitable as an article. But the subject seems to me so important that I decided still to send it to you in the hope you may have some use for it. Since you can find space for Heffer and Jay, your readers may not be too much shocked by a somewhat radical "laissez faire" position.
