Prime Minister

I think this is a bad precedent.
Once a year is better.

Cranley Onslow telephoned me last week to ask if you would address the 1922 Committee on the Eve of the Christmas Parliamentary recess.

I have made a provisional entry in the diary, but there is in fact no precedent for you to address the 1922 more than once a year, ie. on the Eve of the Summer recess. I think Cranley is being a bit too over-zealous in asking you to talk to them in December. What are your own views?

You are due to have your regular 15 minute meeting with Cranley Onslow on Thursday after Question Time. May I suggest that you raise with him the question as to whether or not you really should visit the Committee in December?

(You have a time pencilled in to your diary for the Executive to come and see you on 10th December).

I think to remember
I addressed them last year but it was a mistake
