PRESS DIGESTQUEEN'S SPEECH

Star page 2 - Maggie's flogging off the lot. Electricity and water industries up for grabs - heading on round up of Queen's Speech main provisions. Leader on water and electricity privatisation says it is good and bad news. Good news that they will no longer be in the "iron cage" of bureaucracy; bad news there will still be no real competition. It hopes there will be enough safeguards to protect consumer.

Sun page 2 - Maggie's new master plan. Reforms to affect all. Rip-roaring programme of political reform which is summarised over most of the page. Leader says your purpose is to take Britain so far down the road to freedom that there can be no turning back and the Socialists are in no state to stop you.

Mirror page 2 - Jail crackdown on provo assassins. Leader says the Queen's Speech is more of the same but more so. For the most part it is Thatcherism at its most raw. Next year there won't be much left to privatise so the Queen had better watch out.

Today pages 8 & 9 - double page spread headed "Maggie cuts the last apron string - a revolutionary charter for women to allow them to compete on equal terms for all jobs". This heads a comprehensive digest of the Speech's main provisions. Leader headed "Maggie the transformer" says the privatisation of water and electricity will almost complete the extraordinary transformation of Britain. It is far more than the economy you have changed; you have transformed attitudes. The switch from public sloth to private initiative lies at the heart of the changes.

Express page 2 - IRA terrorists face longer jail terms. On pages 6 & 7 an extensive account of the programme headed "Full speed ahead - great years are on the way declares Thatcher".

Edward Pearce, in Express, says Kinnock has taken on a dull, dispirited manner. If this was a call to arms it would have had trouble raising a platoon.

Leader headed "Tory revolution keeps rolling" says not even its critics could seriously accuse this Government of standing still. Get your big legislative battles fought and won in the first few years after election is the golden rule.

PRESS DIGEST

Mail page 9 - Maggie's football revolution kicks off a marathon for Parliament - a heavy programme and an avalanche legislation for what promises to be the most hectic, crowded and contentious session. Leader: No-one can fairly say on the evidence of the Queen's Speech that this Government is running out of steam. On the contrary the Thatcher revolution is, if anything, gathering speed. Tory MPs, whatever the late sittings - will have the satisfaction of knowing that it should help make for a safer, freer and more dynamic Britain.

Telegraph page 1 lead - Thatcher keeps up momentum of reform. Water and power privatisation head list of major legislation. the rowdy exchanges left you in little doubt you are facing one of the most controversial sessions since you came to power. Back page summary of 16 Bills identified in Queen's Speech. Inside, pages 18 & 19 - full account of the programme. Leader says you will be a remarkable politician indeed if you and your party can complete this session according to the programme outlined yesterday. No room for the Government to be complacent about its chances after the wafer-thin majorities on eye and dental test charges.

Independent - Customers to foot pollution bill. You herald higher electricity and water bills as the welcome price to pay for environmental improvement. Thatcher to cut remission for convicted terrorists. The new move represents a significant change of stance by you. You are now differentiating between terrorist and non-terrorist, a principle which lay at the heart of the 1981 hunger strikes. You have your way with Sinn Fein. It is known that the planned law requiring a renunciation of violence declaration will be put before Parliament at your personal insistence against a number of Government voices opposing the measure as counter-productive and ineffective; Leader says water privatisation is one of the hardest measures to justify in the legislative programme. Its inclusion is based on ideological fashion.

In guest article for Independent, Philip Knightley looks at today's Security Service Bill and regrets that there will be no parliamentary control of the security service. He praises the American model and suggests that there is to be no similar scheme here because it would reveal the enormous size of the British secret world.

Crackdown on terror groups by Thatcher is page 1 headline in Times as 16 Bills are unveiled. You surprise Commons over remissions. Sell-offs top the Tories agenda. Leader describes the legislative programme as one of the heaviest. It does not expect the programme to unleash the bitterest kind of controversy the Government has encountered in the past, although water and power privatisation could bring the Government into controversy deeper than now seems apparent.

Times leader welcomes the proposals for the Security Service, even if overdue, but feels they are unlikely to calm all concerns caused by the Spycatcher, Massiter and Bettaney affairs. Michael Evans in the Times looks at the need for formal rules for the Security Service, saying that the action taken by the Home Secretary was inevitable.

FT leader says the revolution continues. Your government shows no sign of a loss of momentum and the parliamentary majority will ensure all bills get through. But little was said yesterday about the economy, which will determine success or failure.

FT - Water and electricity privatisation bills will be rushed in next week to underline the Government's intention to maintain the momentum of its radical legislative programme. Sales are expected to raise between £20 and £30 billion before the next election. There will be a number of small privatisations. The Secret Service Bill was asked for by the Service itself after the recent spate of revelations by former officers. Opposition suspect its purpose may be to distract attention from the Official Secrets Bill reforms.

Guardian page 1 lead - Terrorists to lose remission. Queen's speech announces tougher Northern Ireland line. Ministers set hasty pace to round off manifesto pledges. Pages 2 & 3 summarise provisions under main heading - menu of legislation for a busy session. Leader says two great themes of this very mature Government came together in the Queen's Speech - on the one hand the economic liberation of the citizen and on the other his spiritual repression. But they are not conclusions which offend the British electorate.

THE QUEEN

Mirror page 1 - Queen's fury at plight of poor at the centre of extraordinary disagreement over Government policy.

Today page 2 - Queen's Russia trip still on the cards. You were forced to back down. Believed that Foreign Secretary is in favour of an invitation.

Express page 2 - Thatcher's veto denial.

PRESS DIGEST

Mail page 2 in story headed "How the party leaders upset the Queen" said she opened Parliament yesterday amid irritation with both Kinnock and yourself - Kinnock for relaying Queen's private concern at Govan by-election result to his party's establishment; and you for "a pre-emptive strike by Downing Street against the Queen going to Russia" if invited by Gorbachev. But you and Kinnock are united in one thing: neither intended to upset the Monarch.

CANADA

Independent - Mulroney becomes first Canadian premier in history to win outright victories in successive election. Also his resounding win he pledges to push through controversial US-Canada free trade deal before the new year. Leader says the Canadian electorate has made the right choice. Despite the risks, the trade deal should be a major boost to the Canadian economy.
