Dear Bill

also mentioned the grandson's name to me, I agree with Williams that a token present will be a good idea.

Many thanks for your telegram no. 223 of 12 November.

2. Cavandoli, whom I saw this morning, took in the message of your paragraph 4, agreed and said he would do his best to ensure that things went that way.

G Harding
18/11.

3. We decided that it was safer to scrap the lunch, have a call at the Ministry at 5 pm and, according to taste, then arrange for a quiet drink later, but not too late, if appropriate. The start the following morning is a bit horrific.

4. It looks as though Pastor will be away, in which case Cavandoli will be in charge.

5. Cavandoli's first grandson (son's son), born on 7 November, is to be called Nicolas. Although this is, I think, only a happy coincidence, a token present brought from London would obviously warm the heart - insofar as it could be warmer than it is already.

RECEIVED IN REGISTRY NO. 18

DESK OFFICER	INDEX	REGISTRY

Dear Bill

Mr. Beam for advice pl.

10/11

A note to explain -
 since you might suspect that I have softened in the head with an attack of SOLIPSISM - that I have been to handle DEYOU by personal "hunt and pick" on an unfamiliar machine.
 I can use to something the length of 253, but have neither

68

This was easy to read from 254 which is, I hope, obscure enough in itself to disguise
into the prefix.

Having seen the report
that you have in the secret
in London, I have ventured to give a general briefing (without sight of papers) to John Chick and Andrew Murray. I think we should authorize Cavendish to work long in Oliveri's hopes - if not the Trauma when he hears could be counter-productive. Do you agree?
yours Anthony
