I attach a copy of a letter I have sent to the Prince of Wales' Secretary. Although the Prince may have already received the documents, the Prime Minister wished to make the point that a great deal is being achieved in tackling problems of the domestic environment, and that concern with the global environment does not rest with CFCs and ozone.

The Prime Minister has asked me to send you copies of two recently published documents which she thought would be of interest to the Prince of Wales. The first, Environment in Trust, sets out the record of what is being achieved to preserve and improve the environment on a number of fronts; the second is a study by the National Environment Research Council which identifies the key processes in the global environment and suggests priorities for future research.
