This is just to record that I discussed briefly with the Prime Minister today my note of 19 August, a copy of which you have seen, in which I suggested that she might consider taking part in one or two Parliamentary debates of the Government's choosing during the forthcoming Parliamentary Session. Generally speaking the Prime Minister seemed disposed to such a course provided that suitable subjects could be identified sufficiently far in advance. Foreign Affairs and Defence was one obvious example. You might like to consider reverting to this subject at one of the Monday morning business meetings.

a few days before PM's next meeting with Chief Whip, Lord Ross etc. I will put a note into the summary list of this. We should also remind the Chief Whip of the possibility before the meeting.
