Thanks to the French, the programme for the bilateral gets shorter and shorter.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer thinks he and Beregovoy could be better employed at ECOFIN. That is probably right.

Dear Richard,

ANGLO/FRENCH SUMMIT

Christopher Prentice wrote to me on 14 June with an outline programme of the Anglo/French Summit.

The programme is manageable though it is now very short indeed.

Pierre Morel telephoned this morning to confirm that an announcement of the visit would be made today. He proposed to include a list of participants but since this included the Chancellor of the Exchequer (who hopes to be at ECOFIN) and did not include the Minister of Agriculture (about whose participation M. Morel had not heard) we agreed that it would be better simply to say that the Summit could take place next Monday and not to list participants at this stage. I repeated that the Prime Minister attached importance to Mr Gummer being there.

M. Morel said he would get back to me about the participation of Agriculture Ministers. He was also rather pressing about the desirability of Finance Ministers being at the Summit rather than ECOFIN. I said that the clash was unfortunate but it was a very important ECOFIN. Morel said he would consult.

Morel said that we would shortly be getting from the French Embassy in London suggestions for the agenda. He rattled off the following list:

- international affairs (including security and defence)
- the London Economic Summit
- the Middle East
- disarmament
- security in Europe

DS

- Yugoslavia
- Cyprus
- future co-ordination of humanitarian action (lessons from Iraq)
- European Community issues
- bilateral relations including political consultation ("how we interact"); economic, industrial and technical co-operation; defence.

I suggested that the subjects on top of the Prime Minister's agenda would be:

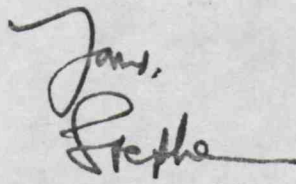

- the European Council, including CSFP
- bilateral defence and security co-operation
- the London Summit

The Heads of Government should perhaps focus on those items given the lack of time available. Maybe the broader international issues, like the Middle East, Yugoslavia and Cyprus, could be discussed primarily by Foreign Ministers. Morel agreed. He said that the lunch would not be a plenary but would be an opportunity for the President and the Prime Minister to pursue their discussion, with the participation of the other Ministers. The other Ministers would not report on their separate discussions until the afternoon plenary.

The idea of discussing future co-ordination of humanitarian action strikes me as a good one we might build up. Could Foreign and Defence Ministers be invited to co-operate in drawing the lessons from Northern Iraq and planning for future co-operation?

BS // I should be grateful if briefing for the visit could reach me no later than Thursday 20 June. I should be grateful if the briefing could include an outline of the kind of statement we might make to the press after the meeting.

I am copying this letter to Simon Webb (Ministry of Defence), Jeremy Heywood (HM Treasury), David Rossington (Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food) and Sonia Phippard (Cabinet Office).

Dear Jeremy,

ANGLO-FRENCH SUMMIT: ECOFIN

After consulting the Prime Minister, I have told Morel (Elysée) that the Chancellor will have to leave Dunkirk on Monday in time to be in Brussels for the start of ECOFIN at 1400 hours. I said that the Prime Minister much regretted the conflict of engagements, but the Chancellor had already asked all his ECOFIN colleagues to postpone the start of the meeting. We could not postpone it any further, and he had to be there at the beginning. The Prime Minister hoped the President would understand.

Morel appeared to take this news in his stride.

I am sending copies of this letter to Christopher Prentice (Foreign and Commonwealth Office) and Sonia Phippard (Cabinet Office).

Jans,
Stephen

The French have suggested that HMA Paris and Mr Wall should attend the Ministerial lunch, but that all may attend the Plenary Session. It would be helpful to know whether the Prime Minister is content with this.
